The Next War

"Armored with such liquids the airman of the next war will not need a machine gun. . . . All he need do is to attach a sprayer to the tail of his machine and rain down poison on the earth as the farmer kills the bugs on his potato field. One plane carrying two tons of the liquid could cover an area 100 feet wide by seven miles long and could deposit enough material to kill every man in that area by action of his skin." This graphic picture of the next war appears in a description of the government exhibit lately held in Washington to "show the American people what the chemist has done for them and may do for them in war and peace." The picture is correct. There is no doubt that the next war will be just so. And there is no doubt, either, that there will be a next war—if the Washington conference fails.

It is the fashion nowadays to be cynical, if only because it is easier to be cynical than to think. It is easier to accept the next war and to talk about it than to probe among ugly difficulties for a hope of peace. A whole people, taking this easiest way, can annul by its indifference, distrust, hostility, the sincerest efforts of its leaders; just as it can dictate the country's policy by determined public opinion forcibly expressed.

In the question of disarmament every student at Bryn Mawr is as much concerned as any other citizen of the country. She has an advantage over most others, because she is going to be given a chance of expressing her opinion. Her obligation then is to know what she is saying. Shall Bryn Mawr shrug its shoulders and talk lightly of the next war?

Non-Com.

Very few of us can be "big bugs," association presidents, class officers or Varsity players. But it is we who have "made" them "what they are today," and it is on us that their success or failure depends. No plan of theirs can work unless we are willing to help it and only by our wholehearted and emphatically expressed approval can they gain courage to keep on.

With the comparative amount of time we have, it is our duty to be constantly on the watch for new plans, and suggestions to improve old ones. By attending to petty details we must leave them free for the big issues.

Our share in their victory can be just as great as we are willing to make it. And when their duties become almost unbearable it is our place to be more than ever on the alert to assure them of our faith and co-operation; and, if need be, bring Varsity its breakfast in bed.

WE CAN DO IT.

Hail Britannia!

The much talked of and long awaited All-England Women's Hockey Team arrived on the "Haverford" last Sunday and plays its first match in this country, tomorrow afternoon at the Germantown Cricket Club against the 1920 All-Philadelphia Team. It is not every day that the British, who have played hockey longer than any of us can remember and in many different countries, consider it worth while to make a tour of the United States, and Bryn Mawr, in the hockey-playing center of the country, is especially fortunate in having two matches scheduled with them.

Unique in never having played together before as a team, the British women, of whom six are international players, were chosen by a "Hockey Council" from all parts of England, so that their quality can hardly be doubted. Their coming will certainly arouse a new and keener interest in the game, but before that results, Bryn Mawr needs to take some steps towards becoming intelligent on the common phases of the game, and putting itself in good condition.

Language as It Is Studied

To "read French and German at sight"—or any two languages, is indeed a worthy object, and has been provided for in "New" and "Old" plans, summer reading, "yearlies," and "Junior languages." These are all very well in their way, but they are bound with a system which is as unjust as it is futile. If the student taking the required examination fails to get high credit, she is automatically obliged to tutor. This tutoring amounts to two or more hours of work a week, and as it is taken by nearly everyone, is time that could be better spent in a seventeen-hour course. Furthermore, the tutoring is aimless, having no immediate examination in view. Would it not be more effective, then, to have a second condition examination within a few months of the first, for which students would prepare themselves on their own responsibility, as in all other subjects? This would mean a saving of time and effort for other work throughout the year.

THEY OWN THEIR OWN (Clipping From "St. Ignatius Post") Montana, October, 1921

Some of the local school teachers (the Misses Kales and Porter, of the Hillside School, and Kellogg and Archbald, of the St. Ignatius School) now own collectively a new Ford car, with all the fancy trimmings, which they purchased last week through Dishmon and Hoffman, the local Ford dealers.

A number of the young automobile drivers about town had anticipated an opportunity to teach the girls how to manage their new jitney, but a garage man, greasy overalls, and married, was chosen for the job, to the great disgust of the aforesaid youths.

WORLD CITIZENSHIP PLANS LECTURES ON WORLD PEACE

Dr. Roberts May Open Course

International problems will be discussed in a series of lectures which is being arranged by the World Citizenship Committee for Wednesday evenings in the latter part of the semester. The committee hopes to have Dr. Roberts, of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brookline, to open the course.

Dr. Roberts gave a course at Silver Bay and is the author of several books. He will probably lecture on the spirit of international peace, and is expected on the 6th or the 19th of November.

Aspects of the question which will be taken up in the following lectures will include the new frontiers and new states of Central Europe and the Near East, Reparations, Latin America, and Russia. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt will speak on the general subject of the peace on the Wednesday after Thanksgiving.

DR. ABBOTT SEES MOTHERHOOD AS COLLEGE GIRL'S AIM

From the "New York Times"

Speaking at a luncheon of several hundred Vassar Alumnae in New York last Friday, Dr. Lyman Abbott, editor of The Outlook, and a member of the National Advisory Committee, compared men's and women's colleges.

"When a man's college needs help," Doctor Abbott said, "the graduate is told that his Alma Mater needs aid. I am sorry for the man who does not answer to the appeal of his mother at the time of her distress."

"Vassar does not send out women to become great doctors, lawyers, scientists, business administrators or money makers. It has been doing something better than that. It has been educating women to be great mothers. We can estimate in dollars and cents the worth of a lawyer or financier, but it is impossible to estimate the worth of a mother."

HARVARD HAS COURSE IN CHINESE

From the "New York Times"

For the first time in forty years Harvard University will offer a course in the Chinese language during the second semester in February. Dr. Yuen Ken Chao, who has been teaching physics at Cornell University, has accepted an appointment at Harvard as instructor in philosophy.

Dr. Chao, a native of Shanghai, was graduated from Cornell in 1914 and took his Doctor's Degree in Logic at Harvard two years later. The course which he will give in philosophy will be in the Chinese tongue. No such course has been given at Harvard since the days of Ko-Kun-hua, who taught Chinese from 1879-1882 through the generosity of Francis P. Knight, of Boston, who raised a subscription in 1877 to maintain a teacher of Mandarin Chinese.

IN THE NEW BOOK ROOM

Six "books of the summer" are in the new book room at the easy disposal of students whose vacations were spent out of reach of Scribner's and Brentano's. These are:

Thirteen Travellers, by Hugo Walpole.

Sisters-in-Law, by Gertrude Atherton.

Back to Methuselah, by Bernard Shaw.

White Shadows of the South Seas, by Frederick O'Brien.

The Mirrors of Downing Street, by the Gentleman with a Duster, and Queen Victoria, by Lytton Strachey.

Another book, The Mirrors of Washington, though not on the new book shelf, also came out this summer, and is more interesting to Americans than the Mirrors of Downing Street, since the characters it sketches are naturally more familiar. The chapter on Senator Knox is especially interesting in the light of his recent decease.

JUNIOR PLAY TO BE GIVEN TO SENIORS INSTEAD OF FRESHMEN

According to Gregofy Zilboorg, the sum-mary of the author's philosophy is ex-pressed in "He, the One Who Gets Slap-ped," by Leonid Andreyev, to be presented by the Junior class to the Senior class in the gymnasium on November 4. It is one of the first Russian plays to be given at Bryn Mawr and differs greatly in atmosphere from the usual college play.

Leonid Andreyev was born at the end of the last century at a period of extreme depression; "he combines the gloom of his time with a spirit of almost anarchistic revolt." Leo Tolstoy said of him, "Leonid Andreyev tries to frighten me but I am not afraid."

Andreyev is the author of many short stories and realistic dramas, ranking with Chekov and Gorki, according to Mr. Zilboorg.

Jacob Ben-Ami, who played so success-fully in "Samson and Delilah" last season, will appear in New York this winter in "He, the One Who Gets Slapped," given under the title of "The Clown."

LECTURER OF WIDE REPUTATION TO SPEAK ON POLITICS HERE

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, "a leader of the non-militant suffragettes," and a speaker who has lectured throughout the United States and in almost every country of Europe, will begin a series of political lec-tures on Thursday, October 27, at 8 P. M. in Taylor Hall. "Politics and the Citizen" will be the subject of the first of Mrs. Catt's five lectures.

Mrs. Catt was president of the Internat-ional Woman Suffrage Alliance and from 1900-1903 and since 1916 has been presi-dent of the National American Woman Suffrage Association. In the campaign for the equal suffrage amendment to the con-stitution, Mrs. Catt was an active leader.

ORGANIZATION OF JUNK COMMITTEE

The Junk Committee, changing its method, has appointed a head junker in each hall, who will be responsible for col-lecting and packing all the junk in her own hall. The appointments are: M. Voor-hees, '22, in Denbigh; F. Seligman, '23, and M. Buchanan, '24, in Rockefeller; M. An-gell, '24, in Pembroke-East; L. Coffin, '24, in Pembroke-West; K. Galloway, '24, in Merion, and P. Sharp, '24, in Radnor.

A complete outfit was sent this year by the Junk Committee to orphans from Dr. Grenfell's Mission, who are studying in the United States.

Rev. E. P. Jones to Speak Next Sunday

Rev. E. P. Jones, who will conduct chapel here next Sunday, has been spoken of as "not only a successful worker in his home church, but among the very foremost personalities of his denomination."

Dr. Jones is a graduate of the University of London, where he took first-class hon-ors in philosophy. But while yet in his teens, before he had finished his college career, he had become "one of the foremost young preachers of the principality."

He has doubled the membership of the largest English Presbyterian church in Wales, where he went in 1905. This year he represented his denomination as a dele-gate to the Pan-Presbyterian Council, held in Pittsburgh during the last part of August.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL ORGANIZED

Among other recommendations delegates advised that the days at Silver Bay be made less crowded, and that the athletic activities be less highly organized. An executive council, composed of the mem-bers from Barnard, Bryn Mawr, Hunter, New Je sey State, and Vassar Colleges was appointed.

New Polish on Library Floor Saves Kitty

A demonstration of the use of waxed hardwood occurred last Thursday, when the newest campus pup, who was inspecting the library, took a short sprint after cat flesh. His surprise was great, according to an eye witness, when he skidded past the door at forty miles an hour, totally unable to stop himself, while his prey stood complacently just outside. During the establishment of puppy equilibrium, kitty is said to have made her escape.

MONDAY EVENING MUSICALS HELD AT "WYNDHAM"

Specially Contributed by Mr. Surette

The Music Department of the College has inaugurated meetings for informal music in the music room at "Wyndham" on Monday evenings from 8 to 8.30 o'clock. All students are invited to come. The first meeting was held on October 10 and 135 students were present. The greater part of the music was performed by students. Miss Gehring, '25, and Miss Wilson, '25, played part of Arensky's suite for two pianos. Miss Rice, '23, played one move-ment from Cesar Franck's sonata for the violin and piano, Miss Saunders, '24, play-ing the piano part. Miss Minot, '24, sang an air from "Pinafore," and Professor Al-wyne played Liszt's "Second Sonnet of Petrarca," Beethoven's "Eccossaisen," De-bussy's "Prelude in A Minor." Miss Morse played "In Autumn," by Moszkowsky.

At the second meeting, on October 17, Miss Gehring and Miss Wilson played again. Mrs. Crosby Brown, of Ardmore, Dr. Goodman, Miss Rice and Mr. Alwyne played Purcell's "Golden Sonata" for two violins, cello and piano. Miss Rice played the first movement of a violin concerta by Nardini, with Miss Saunders playing the piano, and Mr. Surette led the whole com-pany in singing familiar American songs and two fine chorales of Bach. Miss Stewart played theme and one variation and "Funeral March" from Beethoven, Opus 26.

The object of these meetings is to bring together informally all those in the Col-lege who care to take part in music either by performing or by listening to it. Col-lege music should not consist solely in courses for music students. It should be a part of the life of the College; some-thing in which everybody has a share how-ever slight. In fact the value of music in a college depends to a considerable extent on this. These informal evenings have already discovered considerable musical talent and have revealed a general love for music through which it is hoped many in-teresting things may come.

MEMBERSHIP WEEK PLANNED FOR CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION DRIVE

Beginning October 23, the Membership Committee will complete in one week its drive for members of the Christian Asso-ciation. At an informal meeting in each hall a Junior will explain to the Freshmen the work of the Christian Association and the basis of its membership. Every one in College, former members included, will have the opportunity to join for the year 1921-1922. The report of the drive will be given in Membership Vespers on Sunday, October 30.

Last year 225 undergraduates and twelve graduates were members of the Christian Association. The dues were $1.50 a year.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE OF TWO ALUMNAE FOILS POLICE

Relentless activity on the part of the police forces throughout China have failed to unearth any clues as to the whereabouts of L. Beckwith, '21, and E. Donnelly, '21, who were reported by the publicity chair-man to be teaching in a mission school out-side Chian-fu-fung, China.

To follow up the announcement made in the News last week, the BRYN MAWR COL-LEGE NEWS correspondent in China called at the mission school mentioned. If indeed Miss Donnelly and Miss Beckwith have been there they have left no trace. They had taught no one to speak English and the reporter was unable to converse with even the most advanced of the Chinese profes-sors in the school.

Chinese police are still on the trail of the two missing alumnae. As the two young women have been described as "lively and presentable" it is thought cer-tain that they cannot long remain undis-covered.

NO NEED FOR PESSIMISM, ACCORDING TO DR. MACLEAN

"We are never quite so certain of any-thing as we are when we are young and at college," according to the Rev. Norman MacLean, of Edinburgh, in his speech in chapel last Sunday night.

"But at all ages we may be sure," he went on to say, "that however gloomy the world may appear and however pessimistic we may feel, things will eventually turn out for the best. For we are the work of God's hands and it is unthinkable that He should forsake us. As we feel for the work to which we have been impelled and on which we have spent much time, so God feels for us to whose making he has given cons. Those nations that defy the laws of humanity perish; the world is filled with God and all we see is a vision of God discharging his responsibilities."

Dr. MacLean concluded with the story of a Scottish pastor at the deathbed of an old parishioner. "Now, Jane," the minister asked, "what will you say if after all the Lord let you dro down to hell?" "Weel, pastor," the old lady replied, looking up with a little smile, "He'll lose more than I will." "So would God lose if he broke His word to us, and so it is certain that He never will."

Dr. Swindler Spends Summer Abroad

Dr. M. H. Swindler, associate professor in Latin and archaeology, spent the greater part of the summer vacation in Italy, where she studied two months in the museums and excavations in Rome, and took various trips into Etruscan territory. She also spent two weeks visiting the Greek sites in Sicily, and made a short stay in London and Paris.

English Hockey Stars In Action

From the Evening Public Ledger for October 18

The English team, which has eight international players and stars picked from all sections of England, had its first work-out at the Germantown Cricket Club Monday afternoon. The young ladies dashed on the field lashing out with their hockey sticks as young colts leap with kicking heels into a field of clover.

Spirit of Youth

First to burst from the dressing room on to the field, like the spirit of youth and joy rampant, came Kittie Lidderdale, acclaimed as the greatest woman hockey player the world has yet produced. She is a comely little maid, with sun-kissed cheeks and her blonde hair made blonder by constant life in the out of doors.

The wee athlete was dressed in the uniform the English girls will wear in their matches here. Simplicity, you might say, was the keynote. Of course, they wear 'em short this year, but the English girls are wearing 'em shorter. Their garb is a bright red tunic not even approaching the knee. The open neck and short sleeves of their white blouses peek forth from the sleeveless tunic, the color of which was chosen to represent the English rose.

The Yankee team this year will adopt the English style. Jake Gray, who is equipping the locals, had his women's designer on the job yesterday and the American costumes will be out in short order. It will probably be a blue tunic and all the rest of it.

The English players wear a shield on their heaving bosoms with the initials of their team and the English rose couchant.

Jolly Times

Miss Lidderdale was snared away from the practice a few moments and talked enthusiastically of the jolly time they expected to have over here.

"It was great to be invited over," she said. "We've only been here a day, but it's wonderful."

The English players don't go in for training in the American sense of the word, but they have their own way of keeping fit.

"On the boat we had setting-up exercises every day," explained the little star. "Some days it was regular drill. Other days we did a few turns at a run around the decks. We just eat what we feel like eating all the time, no regular diet or don't eat this and don't eat that. With some of us on the boat it was 'dinner without' and with others it was 'dinner 'n th' puddin,'" she grinned.

They believe in "keeping their hours" and for the rest of it, they keep in physical condition by their practice. They go into it with a zest and abandon that shows better than words their love of the game.

"Always played it," continued Miss Lidderdale. "Started when I was ten years old. The girls play it in England as soon as they're able to lift a stick."

Eight Months' Play

"We play it eight months in the year. They play it in every school, then in college and after that the girls join clubs and keep on playing. I go to the Ladies' College, at Cheltenham. We have 850 girls there. About 820 girls play it at my college, that's all. The reason the other thirty don't come out for the team too is that some of them have weak hearts, physically unable, or else they are day scholars and have to catch a train too early. Field hockey is our woman's national game there. We also play la crosse along with field hockey. The other four months we play tennis, golf and cricket."

Asked why she thought the English players had the "edge" on Americans, Miss Lidderdale said the answer was easy.

"Because we have played it so long and because we have played since we were girls eight months in the year," she replied. "At our college we have five coaches. It's systematic training that develops teamwork and stickwork. Experience in so many games puts us on to lots of tricks not developed over here yet. But the girls are splendid athletes. They learn so quickly and they are so enthusiastic. O, dear, I suppose we'll soon be outclassed in field hockey, too. But that's for the future. Right now this international play is a wonderful thing for the game and it's a great honor and pleasure to be of assistance, to teach anything we know and to play such good sports."

Miss Lidderdale said it was admitted that the English team was a little faster than the All-Philadelphia team that went over there last year, "but not much."

The Hip Turn

"We practice speed," she said. "We have a way of turning, too, so that our backs can catch an opponent almost as soon as she has passed. Instead of turning on the hips, your players run around in turning, losing time where we gain."

The English players have varied and sundry tricks of stickwork our players have not developed. They use their feet to back up the club in stopping the ball almost continuously, turn the toe down instead of playing with the sole of the club on the ground and have other clever stunts. The best of these is actually picking up the ball with the club, as one scoops a tennis ball, wheeling and carrying it on the face of the club.

"It trains the eye," exclaimed Miss Lidderdale, "and it often comes in handy, if you can do it. We picked it up from the men. O, yes, we play the men in mixed matches when they come down for the holidays. It's real sport if they are good players. If they're not skillful they're too clumsy and rough for fun. They bump us with their shoulders and think nothing of our poor shins."

Miss Lidderdale holds down the most important position on her team, center forward. She had a good chance to size up the American team last year.

"I think we were able to beat because they have not learned our system of short passing," she explained. "They use a long pass and open play which we have not found the best. Individually they were fine players, but our teamwork and bunched play seemed to be more successful. We were delighted with the games they gave us, though, and are quite crazy over a chance to play the magain."

Off Again

The little star could stand it no longer. All about her they were socking the ball with lusty swipes. It came near her. Bang! She smacked it for a row of home runs and tore down the field like the red glow of a comet darting across the heavens.

Watching the play on the side lines was a dignified person who might have been the English mentor of the team. Jake Gray, of Spalding's, for it was indeed he, consented to be interviewed.

"This is the coming American women's game," beamed Mr. Gray over a long cigar. "I know this for a fact. In other years we might have a demand for a hundred or so field hockey sticks. This year we have already sold 2000. There is tremendous interest in these games. Our local girls are naturally athletic. They are taking to this game like ducks to water. It's great for exercise, it has science and excitement, everything that makes it a fine sport for women. We can't get out the material fast enough."

"The girls are even getting set to have a public field opened in Fairmount Park, and then I'm sure the game will take like wildfire."

Mr. Gray paused a few moments to explain the intricacies of the club and ball the hockeyists use.

Did you ever hear the story of the humble Sophomore?

Neither did we!

BRYN MAWR SAW SOCCER AND FOOTBALL BEFORE THE WAR
Athletics have always been supported at Bryn Mawr, but in the old days an even greater variety than exist today were practiced. Soccer, for one, was played, and a series of games between the halls was played to decide the championship. Football was another sport which claimed attention and was practiced according to the best established rules. In the fall of 1914 a game between the Odds and Evens was staged, in which the Odds were triumphant after a hard scrimmage and good playing.

BRITISH REVOLUTIONIZE HOCKEY FOR AMERICAN PLAYERS
Numbering fourteen members the All-England Women's Hockey Team counts forty-two sticks among its baggage which, with only eleven playing in a single match, means almost four sticks to each player. It is in the matter of sticks that the English have taught Americans most about the game.
English players use much lighter sticks than their American cousins. Whereas the American women used to play with those weighing twenty-two or twenty-three ounces, they have now learned to use sticks of not more than twenty ounces. The lighter stick is much easier to handle and this explains the dexterous wrist work which the Overseas Team reports of the English. Control of the ball and skilful passing rather than power are the outstanding features of the English game, it is said. When the latter is required a light stick also permits of a smashing swing, which is a part of Miss Katherine Liddersdale's play, center forward on the All-England team. Rated as the world's best player Miss Liddersdale uses a nineteen ounce stick.
Other players on the British squad are:
Forwards: Miss C. J. Gaskell, captain, Mrs. P. Stewart, Miss A. Willcock, Miss M. Amos, Miss K. Liddersdale, Miss E. Clarke, Miss C. Warner.
Halves: Miss H. Arnfield, Miss P. Scarlett, Miss P. Price.
Fulls: Mrs. E. Ward, Miss Bauman.
Goal: Miss M. S. Clay.
