MRS. GILMAN WILL SPEAK TO LIBERAL CLUB

On Saturday evening, at eight o'clock, Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman will lecture in Taylor Hall on "Woman and Economics." For a number of years Mrs. Gilman has been the leader and inspiration of the woman's movement in America. She is the Ellen Key of American feminism. In her books, "Woman and Economics," "A Man-Made World," "The Home," and other works, she has set forth her doctrines, which are now gradually coming to be accepted by thinking men and women, but which, at the outset, seemed startling, revolutionary and dangerous. She has been devoting her energies to the cause so consistently that her word is generally regarded as important, if not authoritative.

There will be general discussion after the lecture, and Mrs. Gilman will be glad to try to answer all questions which the audience cares to ask.

PRESIDENT THOMAS SPEAKS ON WOMEN AND WAGNER

I have concluded to close the modern world poets with Wagner. Wagner is the one great genius of modern times that has given us some idea of the musical dramas of Greece and Rome, for he believed, like the Greeks, that popular legends—treated with all the resources of poetry, music and acting, become the possession of a whole people. Wagner has done this work for our generation. He was born in 1813, in that wonderful period in which so many geniuses were born or were alive. He died in 1883, at seventy, having recreated for us many of the old mediæval legends. In speaking of Shelley I said that "Eipsychidion" was the most wonderful of love poems. As a poem it is the most wonderful, but it cannot compare in emotional effect to the opera of "Tristan and Isolde." Wagner took the wonderful mediæval love legend and made it into the most overwhelming love tragedy that can be imagined. The greatest of mediæval and modern poets have tried their hand on this legend. You will find in "Tristan and Isolde" Wagner's philosophy in its fullest development. Wagner was very much influenced by the philosophy of Feuerbach and Schopenhauer. "Tristan and Isolde" is permeated by the view that love is the complete realization of life and the complete negation of the wish to live. As we know from Wagner's letters, "Tristan and Isolde" represented the most intense love of his life. He regarded the woman he was in love with at that time as his inspiration. In the "Ring" he has embodied the greatest of mediæval legends, the legend of Sigurd, the Volsung, in its Norse form. In "Lohengrin" he has given us the Cupid and Psyche story of the working of human curiosity against the prohibition of a higher being and the ruin wrought. "Tannhauser" gives the legend of the mediæval goddess of love. The "Flying Dutchman" treats the famous legend of the flying Dutchman. He has taken the greatest religious legend of the mediæval world and embodied it in his "Parsifal." "Parsifal" contains some of the most glorious religious music that our generation can imagine. Wagner has made the legends of our race live for us. We owe him, as poet and as musician, an overwhelm-

DR. M. P. SMITH OUTLINES VOCATIONAL CONFERENCE

The fourth annual Vocational Conference will be held in Taylor Hall on Saturday morning, March 27th, between the hours of ten and one o'clock. There will be short addresses, not exceeding fifteen minutes each, by women who are actively engaged in the business or vocation they represent. A schedule of the order of the speeches and the time when each will be delivered will be posted in Taylor Hall before the Conference, so that students who do not wish to remain throughout the morning may hear any speech in which they are especially interested. The names of the speakers will be announced later; the subjects are as follows: Landscape Gardening, Scientific Farming, Advertising, Journalism, Law, Medicine, Secretarial Work, Social Work, Tea-Room and Lunch-Room Management.

The College has invited the speakers to lunch in Pembroke. The members of the senior class and the graduate students who are interested in meeting any of the speakers are invited to coffee in Pembroke at half-past one o'clock. Students who wish for more detailed information about any of the subjects of the Conference may arrange for short interviews with the speakers in the afternoon by notifying the chairman of the Students' Employment Committee, Miss A. Werner, Denbigh Hall, before March 27th.

The first Students' Conference on "Vocations for Women," was suggested by the committee of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae on Vocational Appointments for College Women, and was held at Smith College in the spring of 1911. Bryn Mawr sent a delegate, and representatives met from most of the Women's Colleges in the East. The speeches, discussions and personal interviews proved so helpful to students who were planning to earn their living, or who intended to devote some of their time to volunteer social work, that similar conferences have been held regularly in most of the women's colleges since that year. Smith, Wellesley and Mt. Holyoke have vocational meetings once a month, conducted by Miss Florence Jackson, manager of the Bureau of Occupations in Boston.

The committee on Vocational Opportunities of the A. C. A. of which Mrs. Martin, Dean of Women at Cornell is chairman, has also been instrumental in organizing Bureaus of Occupation for Wo-

It is seldom that Bryn Mawr hears a sermon which appeals to the whole college as did Dr. Fitch's this Sunday. The sermon was typically a college one, and made the sure appeal of that which lies nearest to the heart. He spoke about the good and the clever at college, quoting the following poem:

"If only the good could be clever
And only the clever be good.
The world would be very much better
Than ever we thought that it could.
But, alas, it is seldom or never
The two hit it off as they should,
The good are so harsh to the clever;
The clever so rude to the good."

A point which particularly struck home was that service should not be measured in quantity, but in quality, and that our greatest social service at present is study.

He suggested the "medias res," where the gift of the devotee, high and courageous feeling, and the gift of the scholar, which may become mere pedantry and diabolical pedantry at times, are combined in the man of true religion and scholarship.

CORRESPONDENCE COLUMN

(The Editors do not hold themselves responsible for the opinions expressed in this column.)

Dear Editors:

In so much as we Freshmen have been exalted against our will in many cases to the high position of proctor, we beg you to remember that, as in the case of flower-girls and duchesses, a proctor is not a proctor merely because she is elected, but because she is treated like one. The very pathetic example of a Freshman whose sad duty it is to be proctor in a corridor full of Seniors comes to the mind. This poor person hour after hour heard the abounds of laughter issuing forth through the open transom of a Senior's room, and time after time she debated to herself whether duty should be stronger than those dreaded epithets "trite and presumptuous." At last when she had mustered up all her available courage, and with trembling knees and shaking fingers, she had approached the door, and had entreated, begged that "the Seniors-er-ah make just a trifle-er-less noise," we regret to say that her presence was ignored! Could anything be more tragic than this? So we requested you of the upper classes, even if you do not regard the Freshman proctor as the personification of law and order, at least to remember that she is taking herself most seriously, and that it would be an act of kindness, if you were to preserve this pleasing little hallucination.

T. B., '18.

Dear Editors:

Did someone say Bryn Mawr students were poor sports? We should like to introduce that person to the Class of 1916. Nothing could have shown better clean sporting spirit than '16's attitude toward the mistake in the swimming meet scores. To have enjoyed the thrills of your first victory after two years' hard work in athletics and then have all your exultation dashed to the ground would be enough to give anybody the "blues." But '16 was not to be disheartened by that. Their captain showed what thoroughly good sports they are when she said to a 1917 person, "Well, we're pretty close rivals! Remember the gym meet? Never mind! We'll beat you yet!"

ALUMNÆ NOTES

Kate E. Chambers, '11, has announced her engagement to Laurens Hickok Seelye. Mr. Seelye, who is finishing his last year at the Union Theological, is the son of the Rev. William Seelye, of North Conway, N. H. No date has been set for the wedding.

Katherine Pagn, '13, has charge of the "Health Department" for the care of the Belgian refugees in London. The office of the department is at the War Refugees Headquarters and is open from 9 to 5 daily.

Georgina Biddle, who was doing graduate work at Bryn Mawr, preparatory to entering Johns Hopkins next year, has been obliged to give up her work owing to slight injuries sustained from a fall when riding.

STRIPE MUFFLERS FOR LEPERS

Many will remember the interesting sermon The Rev. Mr. Higginbottom gave to us about the lepers in India. These lepers need mufflers, 12 inches wide and 2 yards long, the brighter the better. Striped mufflers or plain are wanted, the only restriction being, that much blue must not be used as it is a low caste color. These mufflers are wrapped about the head in the day and at night the lepers roll themselves up in them. Please everyone knit mufflers and bring them to F. Kellogg, Pem. East, when finished. You have until the end of college to make them.

ing debt of gratitude. Everyone of you who are now growing up and forming your thoughts and imagination for the rest of your life should learn to appreciate Wagner's operas. You may not like them at first, but persevere and suddenly they will seem to you surprisingly wonderful. When I was in Lepsic in 1879 the operas were given by one of the greatest Wagner conductors in the world. The merchants in Lepsic were rich and could afford to bring famous singers there and pay the prices they demanded. But when I first heard the Wagner operas they were absolute gibberish to me. After about a year of hearing them over and over again the realization of what Wagner was, came to me. His music gave me my musical education and has been one of my greatest joys. The two great musical composers that seem to have influenced Wagner most were Mozart and Beethoven. From Mozart and Beethoven, love of Wagner leads one back also to other earlier musical geniuses. Then, of course, his music leads one forward. Any one that loves Wagner loves, too, Strauss, Dubussy and other modern musicians. One can read nothing more delightful than Wagner's life. It shows us how much more sensitive to genius we shall be when women wield more influence. Women are very susceptible to Wagner's genius. In his lifetime they could not turn a deaf ear to his music. They gave him their money, their time and their husband's houses. German merchants went off on their business trips and returned to find Wagner in possession of their houses, writing his operas. Women seemed to be overwhelmed by the great power of his genius. Women, at the present time, have more leisure to read and more time to study really difficult artistic things. They are the greatest admirers of Wagner. If you look around at a Wagner opera night you will see that the audience is made up of appreciative and entranced women who have succeeded in bringing with them perhaps one man for every ten women. This only shows that women have had the leisure to understand what Wagner's music means.

TROPHY CLUB RECEPTION

On Friday, February 12th, the annual Trophy Club reception to the Freshmen was held in Pembroke East. When the Freshmen had arrived, Isabel Foster, President of the club, spoke to them for a few minutes. She mentioned the fact that this year an innovation had been made, in that the reception was not held until the second semester, and that this had been done for the purpose of giving the Freshmen an opportunity to recover from the many parties, that they attended, and the many rules that they hear at the beginning of the year. Miss Foster then introduced Dean Reilly who gave an account of the development of the Trophy Club, from the time when it began as a meagre collection of lanterns housed for safe keeping under her bed. Mrs. Smith was the next speaker and she told of the career of the fictitious Maxine Raggles, who originated in a minor Latin class, made brilliant recitations, and wrote for the college papers until she was finally declared non-existent by an edict of the office.

Miss Applebee gave a sketch of her first day at Bryn Mawr, when she awoke from a sleeper to be met by a crowd of students attired in long, full corduroy skirt, who dragged her off to coach hockey from nine o'clock to one and from three to six. From half-past seven until ten she was met by delegations of students and forced to speak on hockey.

Mrs. Andrews (Evangeline Walker, 1893) one of the early Presidents of the Athletic Association had come to Philadelphia to be present at the Conference of Pageant Masters, she consented to speak to the Freshmen. After telling several amusing stories of her undergraduate days, she went on to speak of the first May Day Pageant which she had originated. Mrs. Andrews ended with a plea that if the May Day should ever lose its spontaneity and become in the least a perfunctory performance, it should be abandoned.

The reception on the whole was a great success and the general impression seems to be that having the reception in the second semester is a decided improvement.

UNDERGRADUATE ASSOCIATION
MEETS THURSDAY

A meeting will be held Thursday, at one thirty, to discuss plans for regulating cutting.

The Liberal Club has petitioned the Association to consider Bryn Mawr's joining the Woman's Peace Party of America. The plan for a centralized control of all collections of money will also come before the meeting for discussion.

PROFESSOR DE LAGUNA'S NEW BOOK

The class in Major Philosophy is fortunate in the appearance in time for its use as a text-book of Professor de Laguna's book, "Introduction to the Science of Ethics." The book is in three parts, the first dealing with the scope and relations of ethics, the field of moral judgments, responsibility and freedom, and moral standards; the second containing a survey of the traditional schools and theories of ethics, classical and modern; while the third part contains an elementary presentation of an evolutionary theory of values. This part is well described by the author in his preface as "the first attempt at an elementary presentation of any of the newer phases of the latter subject. Not that the theory of values as such is new. It is as old as ethics itself. But in recent years it has undergone a great development, and one of unusual interest—a development, however, which has remained buried in monographs and treatises that are wholly inaccessible to the undergraduate student as well as to the educated public generally."

The book, as a whole, is written in a clear, unaffected and generally non-technical style, is full of shrewd observations and of fresh illustrations, and it is sure to be welcomed by all teachers of ethics as a thoroughly scholarly and modern handling of the subject of which it treats.

men in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Richmond. It has collected a valuable Occupational Directory of the names and addresses of women who have been successful in "other than teaching positions." This is kept at Smith College and may be consulted by any one who wants special information about vocational positions. The committee has published a bulletin on the preparation necessary for various non-teaching positions, this includes length and cost of training, terms of admission, entrance, salary, etc. This may be obtained from Miss Vida Hunt Francis, general secretary of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, 1225 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, price fifty cents. The committee is engaged this year in an investigation of the positions, salaries and opportunities for advancement for women with special training in Home Economics and Domestic Science. I have been a member of this committee since its foundation in 1909, and I shall be very glad to give any student any information I may have as to openings and opportunities in other than teaching positions.

Marion Parris Smith.

COLLEGE NOTES

The following changes have been made in the cast of "Pinsfore." E. Freer, to take the part of Ralph; K. McCollin, that of little Buttercup, and L. Davidson is to be the Captain. The date of the performance has been changed from May 15th to April 27th.

Professor George Grant MacCurdy, who is lecturing on "The Dawn of Art," is Assistant Professor of Archeology in Yale. The lecture will be illustrated with lantern slides.

Professor Dahlgren, of Princeton, spoke before the Science Club. He gave a most interesting account of his experiences of hunting for Biological Specimens in Italy. In looking for an assistant in his work, he met a young Italian in whom he took a great interest, and so later, when the occasion presented itself, he decided to visit the family of this assistant. Professor Dahlgren and his wife arrived at the little village where their coming was such an event, that his host apologized, because the village band was away. In spite of the very evident poverty of their hostess they were cordially entertained, so cordially, in fact, that they were afraid to delay very long lest they should bankrupt their hostess, or die of indigestion. The news nonchalantly offered by a native that half the town was ill with smallpox hastened their departure.

1915. The result of the election of class book officers is as follows: Editor-in-Chief, F. Hatton; Business Manager, D. Moore; Treasurer, D. Levinson.

1918. Alice Kerr has been elected Cheer Leader in place of M. Winsor, who has resigned.

1917 WINS SWIMMING MEET; 1916 A CLOSE SECOND

On Saturday, February 13th, the finals of the swimming meet were held amid deafening enthusiasm. There were several ties, and at such points, excitement broke all bounds. The end of the meet was particularly thrilling as 1916 and 1917 had kept almost even through all the events. The outcome showed the Class of 1917 as the winners with 26 points, 1916 a close second with 25 1-3 points, 1918 third with 17 1-3 points.

In the relay race at the first meet, the college record was established by 1918, 76 seconds, but the final relay was won by 1917. 1916 and 1918 did most of their scoring through "star work." The greatest number of individual points was won by C. Dowd, '16, i.e., 15 points. N. Gall, '16, and G. Flannigan, '18, tied for second with 10 points, and Scattergood, '17, came third with 9 points. J. Sutton, a graduate, distinguished herself in the fancy diving, winning 23 points. 1917, on the other hand, won mainly by all-round teamwork. Mr. Bishop's help and advice were much appreciated, and he was vigorously cheered before the close of the meet.

Finance Committee.—There is still about $200 needed to complete the budget. The active members of the Association have pledged $775 and the auxiliary members, $100. The committee has been collecting the second semester dues and has sent two hundred notices to the auxiliary members who have not paid their dues, asking them to pay before March 1st. We are also collecting the budget pledges, and would like to have them all in by the same date. If anyone wishes to add anything to her pledge, even ten cents or a quarter, the collectors will be glad to receive it, for in this way we may be able to complete the budget.

There will be a meeting of the Finance Committee at 1.30, Thursday, in the Christian Association Library.

Federation Committee.—If anyone wishes to contribute to the McCall Mission, she should send her contribution to Mrs. Anne E. Sampson, Bryn Mawr. The Mission is doing a great work of relief at the present time among the people of France left destitute by the war. Some recent leaflets on the Mission have been placed on the Federation desk in the Christian Association Library.

The Bible and Mission Study Classes.—The Bible and Mission Study Classes began last week with a large enrollment. This is not remarkable when we consider the interesting subjects offered by the different leaders. Ryu Sato's class, a very large one, heard an interesting talk on education in Japan, with an exhibition of some of the text-books used, the characters of the written alphabet and a lesson in the use of chop sticks. Helen Taft and Agnes Grabau began their studies of the Old and New Testaments, while Mrs. Branson and Miss Applebee began with introductory talks, on Medical Missions and the Epistle of St. John respectively.

The subjects for next week are as follows: "Micah," Helen Taft; "The Gospel of Christ," A. Grabau; "God as Righteousness, and Love," Miss Applebee; "Customs of Japan," R. Sato; "The Three Steps of the Medical Missions," Mrs.

Branson. Mrs. Ohoi, a Hindu woman from Bombay, will be present to talk to Mrs. Branson's class.

A Gym Class at the Settlement.—This is what a gym class is like at the Settlement. At first utter confusion reigns. When the whistle blows a grand scuffle and much shoving ensues, but finally two fairly straight lines of little girls appear. "Aw, teacher, I want to be leader," several voices call out at once. When order is finally established the forty merry little girls march rapidly around the room. They make a scraggly windmill. Then they try their hands at a wand drill. "To the left lunge!" and Viola hits Minnie in the face with her wand. "Trunk forward bend!" and two or three wands fall on the floor with a crash. The drill ends with a jumping jack which sets everybody into shrieks of laughter. It is very different from Miss Applebee's gym class, but the disorder and confusion is more than excused by the flattering enthusiasm of the forty, happy, wriggling, frisking, little girls.

Junk Committee.—Collection of Junk on Friday, February 19th, and Saturday, February 20th. Please turn out your bureau drawers and find something for the Junkera who will carry away for you all the useless and useful articles you can spare. As one of our American poets has said, "Give what you can, to some other it may prove more useful than you know."
