PROEM

A Word, kind friends, ere you begin
To give this book your minute scrutiny;
We have a bit of explanation
Which should precede your examination
In order that you find not sin
Between these covers,—or even mutiny:

* * *

This Class of 1936
Has never applauded itself with pride
On its serious way of conducting affairs:
We have rarely if ever been dignified.
Somehow or other at every event
That called for our dancing or singing a song
We began in traditional calmness until Inevitably, invariably something went wrong,
And all of us ended by laughing instead.
In this way our college course has been run;
Not as expected or planned on but still
Turning out right with us all having fun.
Now, it's not to be thought of that suddenly we Could turn in our tracks and reform on the spot.
It wouldn't be us if we became solemn
And gravely appeared here,—decidedly not!
Thus this book isn't all that at first sight it seems.
It is not a memorial of budding careers,
It doesn't contain many trustworthy facts
Or preach a philosophy of four learned years.
There aren't any tributes or hails and farewells.
But rather, a frivolous spirit prevailed
When the editors took to compiling this book
And the serious Muses sat by and waited;
For we're no more in earnest than ever we've been.
If you've opened these covers in reverence to see
The testament solemn of a Bryn Mawr class
And expect to find sense from A unto Z,
Pause to consider the class to be seen.
In any case, Readers, we beg you to halt
While apologetically we warn you, please,
To take all you find here with a large grain of salt!
Pembroke Arch: The view through the arch gives one of the first impressions of the campus.
Merion Hall: The first hall of residence to be opened. It was completed in 1885.
The Library Cloister: This encloses three sides of a quadrangle of which the main building forms the fourth.
Wyndham, sometimes used as a Hall of Residence for Freshmen: It was purchased by the Trustees in 1926, and stands in its own grounds directly opposite Pembroke West.

"And if thou wilt, remember,
And if thou wilt, forget."
Dear Miss Park:

It all happened because we didn't have any Freshman Week. You see, infantile paralysis was sweeping the country and the opening of college was postponed, so that we were flung defenseless into the midst of trunks, suitcases and upperclassmen falling on each other's necks. We salied forth for our interviews, determined to keep smiling in the face of vicissitudes. This was the origin of the courageous spirit for which we have since become famous. Lantern Night was distinguished for its suspicious lack of wax dripped on our gowns, an ominous forecast which we have been trying ever since to live down, whether successfully or not, the Dean's Office alone knows at this moment. After we had timidly rendered our new class song under the arch, we saw anxious locks on the faces of our elders—those who could not escape being our audience on the singing occasions of college years to come. "They are young, perhaps they will improve," muttered the optimistic; and they were encouraged by our oral singing. Mid-Years and Scarlet Fever descended upon the college next, but we emerged undaunted to tackle the biggest event in our lives, Freshman Show. We were hopeful, then desperate, then saved at the last minute, then elaborate and very confused. Genius sprang, fully-armed, from our ranks, and triumphantly we read in the cynical College News that "Heavenly Bodies" set a new high standard for Freshman Shows; glibly we heard that our performance had awakened memories of Gilbert and Sullivan. One fly, or rather worm, appeared in our ointment: this was the great Jumping Bean Controversy. Wouldn't you admit that a Mexican Jumping Bean was an animal? That's what we thought, but jealousy over the failure of their under-bed tactics to reveal our mascot drove the Sophomores to belittling the Bean. It took the entire Biology department to convince the skeptics that the Animal and not the Vegetable Kingdom claims the Jumping Bean. Again, our courage saved us from a lapse into insignificance. We soon sank from our dramatic heights into the slough of Long English Papers, and you know how that is! Perhaps it accounts for the meagre contribution of our voices on Little May Day, which took most of us by surprise. It was the Great Wind and Rain which revived us, we think, and we are grateful to it even though it did blow the chimney off Merion, uproot several class trees and endanger the boxwood in Wyndham. It gave us a good chance to run wild in outlandish costumes, and give vent to animal (cf. Jumping Bean) spirits, so that we were in prime condition to strike back at the Sophomores on Freshman night. We think, confidentially of course, that they were afraid of us, for they would not give fight on Taylor steps, and pretended to scorn the blue balloons we tied to the much abused bushes before the Library, and the effigy on the Library steps. If, instead, we had stored our energies, we might have been more prepared to withstand the Great Heat which ushered in Finals, and sat with us during our time of trial till we finally escaped, gasping, into the middle of June.

You might think that wasn't so bad for a Freshman class. Well, we were encouraged as we thought it over in the summer, and began more auspiciously the next fall by ferreting out the Parade night song and showing the Freshmen that we knew how to parody even if we couldn't sing on our own very well. It really wasn't the fault of our singing on Lantern Night that caused numbers of Freshmen to faint and a famous college official to fall down the stairs; we thought we did our part pretty well, but we were underrated again; and we are afraid that it was only the conspicuous pre-dominance of '36 in the cast of "The Knight of the Burning Pestle," that reinstated us. We tried to prove what we were worth by dogging the trail of the Freshmen as they prepared their show, (which of course we knew could not compare to ours), but after nearly coming to blows among ourselves as to whether the animal was an ape or a blue eagle, after stealing a package of harmless books, and spending cramped hours under things, we saw an unsuspected turtle creep upon the stage; then we began to fear the Freshmen. We attempted to overcome this feeling with the traditional Party to which however very few of them (or of us) came, and those who did, enjoyed a skit most of the parts of which were forgotten by the actresses, not that it made any difference. We had made the gesture anyhow. We forgot all animosity when Spring and the Scavenger hunt came along, and we felt so gay that we determined to make Little May Day a memorable occasion what with us playing such a prominent part. Well, we did. But could we help it if an extra Senior turned up at the zero hour, demanding a basket and a poem, and if the inhabitants of Pem West thought our waking song went to the tune of "The Road to Mandalay," and sang it thus while the rest of us went through the halls at six yawning another tune, or if our May Pole simply wouldn't wind properly? After spending the day and night before picking flowers and writing verses, and after rising at five A. M. to make coffee, who could expect us to sound like the Viennese Choir Boys, and yet they ridiculed our May Day. On Freshman night you will admit we illustrated that our spirit was unbroken. This was our chance to show the Freshmen that youth is not everything, and we made a wild play for Taylor steps where we found the youngsters lodged. Even a hose took some time to upset them, and we must confess to a glorious grovel, fight, bite and scratch in the mud, which was ended as a draw, we claim, by the Janitor turning off the water supply. To us that was the end of the Freshmen; after that they became Sophomores, which is another thing entirely. Some people might have objected to our impolite methods of asserting ourselves, but it can not be denied that we were very courteous to the Seniors when we gave them a picnic. Why, we even sang them a farewell song which holds the record for being the only one of our songs to receive the request for an encore! The only thing that went wrong with that party was the shortage of food; but if our guests had been patient they would have been fed to satiety on ice cream; but Seniors hate to wait, and we do like ice cream ourselves, so that was really all right. We made it up to them by carrying chair after bowl of flowers after chair from one end of Senior Row to the other, and there were no complaints till we sang that night in front of Taylor, but by that time no one expected anything more of us.

And we tried to do better as we entered our Junior year, because we realized that now other people ought to begin to think we were important, and there was a whole bonny new class who had never heard us sing officially. We chose them a parade night tune and all seemed to be going well till we discovered to our horror that the village band had never heard the tune, and this one brief hour before they were scheduled to play. We had visions of no parade night, or a tuneless one, and ourselves as a lesson and a byword, but our Prima Donna and our President saved the honor of the class by missing dinner and teaching the tune to the band as it marched on the college. We don't think anyone knows this and we wouldn't disclose it now except that we want you to see what heros we can muster in an emergency—we are rather good at that as a matter of fact. You can imagine that our singing was getting to be a college tradition, and we were not really proud of it, and thought we could remedy it by providing song books, but unfortunately the oral singing came before the books so, though they were very good books, the tradition went on. Like the rest of the college we were taken in by Gertrude Stein, and took in "Cymbeline," (Pax Vobiscum) and even got around to having a Banner Night, though there were some of us who seemed too lazy to cope with old Bryn Mawr customs. In fact this struggle between the Sentimentalists and the Weary went on all year now that we had reached the position where we did things instead of having them done to us, and we guess it was this dissension in the ranks which accounted for the ragged reception we gave the Curtain Song of the Freshman Show, although we were very glad indeed to have the show dedicated to us, because we did not have to snoop under anything! We were really very docile in allowing ourselves to be swept along in the Million Dollar Drive, and we ate cakes, scavenged, applauded everything in Goodhart, with special emphasis on "Much Ado But Not For Nothing," and contributed a certain amount to the "Bacchae," and we were well on the way to becoming a self-respecting college class — we had even passed off Little May Day without much criticism because it was raining and nobody else was very well organized either—when we came up against the problem of giving a supper to the Seniors. We finally agreed to feed them, but we refused to sing to them, which was just as well. As a matter of fact there was a supper, and everyone was feasted royally when we learned that the college was in the habit of provisioning such meals, and that all we had to do was act as hostesses, which we had no trouble at all in doing. It was too bad that taking possession of Taylor steps was not as easy, but it was unfair of them to call on us for so many songs and then walk off and leave us to guess when and how to turn ourselves into Seniors, don't you think so?

Then suddenly we were Seniors, and did you ever guess what a difficult time we have had trying to appear dignified? We were foiled almost all the time as usual beginning with the undignified procedure of inspection for T. B. and the ordeal of those X-rays.
Then the excitement of the Fiftieth Anniversary, in which all under-graduates, Seniors included, were made to feel like very small pebbles on an inspiring beach, robbed us of the chance to appear imposing before the new Freshmen, so that for months some of them thought some of us only Sophomores, and we were trying, really! Of course we did our share in the "Messiah" very well, but so did a great many other people. Then came May Day, before which all else pales and all ranks are leveled, so what good does it do you to be a Senior? We haven't actually disgraced ourselves as Seniors, we wish you to understand, but we have never had a chance to see if we could conduct ourselves with decorum. Yes, we are confident that our career here has been under a cloud. Fate has mocked us, and all because our Freshman year began a week late. Oh, but please don't believe that we have not had fun, or wish we had gone to Smith. Oh, no! We have enjoyed it all thoroughly, and we want to thank you so much for having us; and we hope that if ever you are in the Wide-Wide-World, you will come and pay us a visit.

Diplomatically yours,

THE BEAN PICKERS.
SOME STARTLING STATISTICS

In the front of this book we have presented ourselves one by one, so perhaps it is now time to exhibit 1936 as a whole. What are we like collectively and where do we stand in relation to the rest of the world? Here are compiled some amazing statistics which reveal all and without which no year book is complete. In case we ever become famous or in case we want to boast about ourselves in the future these facts may be useful—you never can tell with statistics.

To begin with, we are seventy-seven at the present moment and this in itself is a very interesting fact because seven is generally considered a lucky number and seventy-seven is just eleven times as lucky, and especially so because eleven is also a number of good omen. Thus collectively we are as potent as rabbits' feet and four-leaf clovers.

We are 1616 years old, which is exactly 32.32 times as old as Bryn Mawr College; or 5 and 1/323 times as old as the first collected edition of Shakespeare's works. We might have lived from the birth of Christ to the death of Shakespeare, 35.9 times as long as Elizabeth was Queen of England, or 1590 years longer than John Keats. But the city of Rome is 1073 years older than we are; however we are still 1456 years the senior of the Declaration of Independence, 645 years older than Methuselah and 895 years the senior of Magna Carta, while Queen Victoria was not quite a twentieth as old as we are.

We seem to be 450 feet tall, which means that if we were 42 feet taller we would be 1/2 as tall as the Eiffel Tower. Mount Everest is only 28,852 feet higher than the class of '36, and if we reclined on the floor of St. Peter's in Rome there would be only 186 feet between our feet and the other wall. We are 1/3 as long as the distance from college to the Bryn Mawr Trust Building, and 9/443,520 as long as the Mississippi River. We are also 9/25 as tall as the Empire State Building, but it is rather useless to compare us to the length of the equator or the distance to the moon.

As for weight, we weigh 9495 pounds, or approximately 43/4 short tons or 4 6/25 long tons. If we were solid gold we would make 7,9125 cubic feet of the metal, or in coal we would make a normal supply for one month.

We do not intend to be reduced entirely to comparative figures, however, and so we submit something more emotional about ourselves, i. e. how we feel about certain things.
We are wildly enthusiastic about:

Mrs. Collins
Otto's haircut
The Veterans of Future Wars
Advanced Experimental Psychology
The Conductor with the waxed moustache on the Paoli Local Pauline's muse
Miss Terrien
Molly Gardiner
Venus of Pern West
Toots Dyer
Dr. Anderson's exquisite analytical thinking
Joe Graham
Massachusetts

But we feel rather cool towards:

Tosh
Dr. Veltman's white shoes
Father Coughlin at 4 P. M. Sundays
The Lantern
Pauline's cape
Pennsylvania
Hearst
Hitler

Miss Robbins
Askins
Fenny
Mr. and Mrs. Greek
Judith Weiss
Aggie Halsey
Miss Glen

EXPERIMENTING IN COMPREHENSIVES

Do Seniors know more useful things after four years at college than Freshmen? This is a question which calls for research which we have endeavoured to conduct through that method which is ever increasing in popularity, the comprehensive examination. Two Seniors and two Freshmen, picked at random, kindly lent themselves for anonymous examination in a quiz attempting to cover both the utilitarian and decorative fields of information, and after a gruelling hour they produced the answers which follow. The editors spent a much more gruelling hour trying to grade these papers to see if they proved anything at all, and achieved these results: 50% being a perfect score, Senior A 40%, Freshman A 36%, Senior B 34%, and Freshman B 25%. Furthermore the Seniors knew as much about the Practical Arts as the Freshmen and not unproportionally more about the Liberal Arts. Thus if anything is to be concluded it must be that four years at Bryn Mawr are a good thing. Perhaps we have judged partially, and so to be fair we are publishing our Comprehensive Examination in Intelligence (and Cleverness) with some of the answers, in case anyone would like to form other opinions or even take the test. We would like to print all the answers but limited space makes us draw the line somewhere.

Part I—The Practical Arts

Section I: HOME ECONOMICS

(1) In papering a house, name three places where the paste should go and three places where it should not go. (Don’t be bashful.)
   Ans. On back of wall paper, on wall, on brush; on front of wallpaper, on floor, on me (S).

(2) If your house were suddenly immersed in darkness at 8 P. M., what would you do?
   Ans. Play murder (F) Go to bed candlelesstinely (Clandestinely) (S).

(3) Define or explain the following: (a) housemaid’s knee (b) termites (c) Pyrex (d) Bon Ami (e) Spring house cleaning (f) evaporated milk (g) silver service.
   Ans. (a) The result of scrubbing white marble steps in Baltimore (F) (b) Unwel- come creatures that reside in the beams of houses and eventually cause their decay (F) or This termite be used to describe a species of isoptera (S) (c) Rob- bers on the sea, such as Capt. Kidd (F) (d) It’s never scratched yet (F) (e) Occu- pation of Mole at the beginning of The Wind in the Willows (F) or Not as the name implies confined only to seasonal activities but takes place when one becomes thoroughly disgusted at not being able to find something for which one has been looking (S) (f) Condensed, canned, sweetened, and ruined (F) (g) In France they call it pourboire but in America we say, less picturesquely, “silver service” (S).

(4) Who do you do for moths? (Be merciful)
   Ans. Live and let live (S).

(5) How do you cope with (a) the contents of a vacuum cleaner, (b) burnt matches (c) the grease from frying pans? (Be calm)
   Ans. (a) this calls for a clean sweep (S) (b) put them back in the box and when some one tries to strike them you will have fun (F) (c) Keep it for use on elbows (S).
Section II: KITCHENCRAFT

(1) How do you separate two eggs?
Ans. Eat one, leave the other. This ought to be final (F) or Unyoke them (S).

(2) Identify: (a) Fanny Farmer (b) Dripulator (c) the Iceman (d) Rolling Pin.
Ans. (a) the gastronomic Emily Post (F) (b) An instrument that somehow produces excellent coffee if you know where to put the water and where the coffee (S) (c) Source of humor in low magazines (F) (g) In fiction, an instrument used to induce and maintain domestic discipline (S).

(3) Describe briefly; folding, creaming, whipping, icing, basting.
Ans. A drastic way of mixing cake dough (S) process of trying to make various substances resemble cream (F) inflicted upon eggs and cream and involving a vigorous circular motion of the hand (S) process without which no self-respecting cake is complete (S) the last thing you do before putting whatever it is in the oven (S).

(4) What is so important about Hollandaise sauce?
Ans. Its ability to conceal in taste and appearance that which lies beneath (F).

(5) In lighting the oven, which comes first the gas, the lighted match, or the explosion? (You may reminisce a little but don’t be frivolous.)
Ans. I’ve always tried to find out but the excitement of the inevitable explosion drives all chronology from my mind (S).

(6) Answer one of the following:
(a) Have you ever been in a Strawberry Jam?
(b) Would you ever have occasion to serve hair dressing?
Ans. (a) Yes but Mother was always annoyed (F).
(b) I probably will hair long (S).

Section III: NEEDLEWORK

(1) Do you approach your needle to the thread or your thread to the needle, and where do you wear your thimble?
Ans. You approach the thread to the needle until your first swear word, then vice-versa. The middle of the right hand (F).

(2) If a stitch in time saves nine, how many stitches will you save in hemming a skirt four feet around if you can sew five stitches to the inch? (Hurry up.)
Ans. You can save 214 stitches if you want to but it is easier not to bother to hem it at all (F).

(3) Do you know how to spin, and what do you think of the other domestic habits of the spider?
Ans. I can spin a yarn and I can spin a top, but as for domestic habits, I’m at a dead stop (S).

(4) Distinguish between hemming and hawing; tatting and tattling; crocheting and croqueting; purling and pearling; darning and damming.
Ans. Hemming holds better but hawing is quicker (F). Tatting keeps young ladies out of mischief, tattling gets them in it (S). For one you can use an instrument 3 inches long, the other is played on a lawn with hedgehogs (F). Pearling and purling are practically identical as the final result of both is round and bumpy (F). The former is more ladylike (S).
(5) Are you awfully mad when your wool comes in skeins instead of in balls and how do you control yourself?
   Ans. I am livid but control myself by putting the skein on my hands and getting someone to wind it, thus I am restrained till calm (F) or No, I always enjoy a long yarn (S).

(6) Describe Fabyan tactics in knitting.
   Ans. Almost as violent as Canaday tactics but much more colorful and hap-hazard (S).

Section IV: FINANCE

(1) Taxicab fare is 25 cents for the first two and a quarter miles, and 5 cents for each additional quarter mile. A man has a dollar bill. It is raining and he has just had his shoes shined, so he calls a taxi and rides home. After paying the fare he has $1/2 of the original sum. He tips the driver 1/5 of this amount. How far did he ride?
   Ans. 3 1/2 miles (1S and 1F. The others got it wrong!)

(2) Decide quickly whether to buy a dress for $19.30 or one priced at $20 and reduced 3/4%.
   Ans. I'd buy both if I had $38.60 (S).

(3) How do you (a) forge a check (b) dodge bill collectors (c) abscond with the funds?
   Ans. (a) carefully (b) with difficulty (c) never (S) or (a) Take the check to the blacksmith (b) don't start charge accounts (d) I'm too innocent to even think about such a thing (F).

(4) Distinguish between: discount, account, Count, no-account, county, and the count of ten.
   Ans. If you discount what you have in your account you may be a wealthy count, but more likely you are of no-account in your county and someday you will be out on the count of ten (S).

(5) Can you think of anything useful about square roots?
   Ans. The square root tables (F).

(6) In one word give your opinion of budgets.
   Ans. Unbudgable (F) or unbalanced (S).

Section V: CURRENT EVENTS

(1) Are you really interested in the Dionne Quintuplets? (Give reasons)
   Ans. Yes for History may repeat itself (F).

(2) What are your reactions to the name of William Randolph Hearst?
   Ans. It is so painful to me it tears (a S and a F both had this).

(3) Where is Col. Lindburgh now?
   Ans. At home abroad (F).

(4) What colors shirts do they wear in Italy? Germany? Russia? Ethiopia?
   Ans. Black, brown, dirty and none (F).

(5) What is always going on in Geneva anyway?
   Ans. Conferences (S) or When the “bise” isn’t blowing it rains (F).

   Ans. (a) fossils, living and dead (S) (b) no one knew (S) (c) Socrates (S) (d) all about rocks (S) (e) destiny (S) (f) nothing much (S).

2. What makes a leaf green, a piece of litmus paper blue, a gardenia yellow and a Russian red?
   Ans. Spring, a rainy day, time, and Vodka (F) or Greenness, acid, un-colorness, and capitalists (S).

3. If 4 cc of HOH are poured into a glass containing water and NaCl do you expect anything to happen and are you disappointed?
   Ans. I take this with a grain of salt and am never disappointed (S).

4. Mark the following true or false:
   You can determine the age of the earth by counting the number of wrinkles on its crust.
   A light year is longer than a dark year.
   There is something familiar between a long forgotten egg and H2S.
   The dog fish is a most provoking reptile.
   I have never seen a purple cow.
   People laugh because one of their bones is humerus.
   The higher the fewer.
   (Answered correctly by all.)

5. What is the greatest attraction about magnets?
   Ans. I don't know but a Pole might (S).

Section II: HISTORY

1. In 1066 who was killed by what where and under what simply maddening circumstances?
   Ans. King Harold by an arrow at Hastings and it gave him a maddening pain in the neck (S).

2. Comment briefly on the Diet of Worms or Leap across the Great Schism.
   Ans. (a) This was due to the low standards of living that prevailed during the Middle Ages (F).

3. What was the difference between Pippin the Short and Peter the Great; the Black Prince and Eric the Red; Sarajevo and Sarah Bernhardt?
   Ans. (a) a paltry 10 centuries (S) (b) The Black Prince was in better taste (F) (c) One was the roast the other the toast of many countries (S).

4. What would happen if the sun ever set on the British Empire?
   Ans. The King would make a speech to his unfortunate subjects (S).

5. Do you know anything about (a) Cecil Roads (b) futilism (c) the disillusion of the monasteries (d) the bouillon theory?
   Ans. (a) Bumpy roads generally causing Cecickness (F) (b) a collection of mediaeval slang expressions such as fiet, tithe, vassal (S) (c) People such as Bocaccio believed that the monasteries were never under any illusions anyway (S) (d) Theoretically it may be all right but sometimes it is just grease and water (F)

6. Would it have made any difference to you if Frederick the Great had not known how to play the flute?
   Ans. No, he probably would have fiddled his time away instead (S).
Section III: LITERATURE

(1) Did James I write the Bible and if not what on earth did he write?
   Ans. No, but the "Divine Write of Kings" is often attributed to him (S).

(2) Identify the following quotations:
   (a) "Onion sauce, onion sauce."
   (b) "The lamp of true learning and the light of pure religion."
   (c) "Facilis est descensus Avernus."
   (d) "Three white leopards set under a juniper tree."
   Ans. (a) Mole to the rabbits in the Wind in the Willows (F) (b) Heard in Chapel (S) (c) the Aeneid (S) (d) Ash Wednesday (S both but no Fs!)

(3) Is there any excuse for Dr. Samuel Johnson?
   Ans. Boswell (S).

(4) Who wrote the following:
   (a) Gray's Elegy.
   (b) The Idylls of the King.
   (c) Graduated Exercises in Articulation.
   (d) Tales From Shakespeare.
   (e) Thou Gracious Inspiration.
   Ans. (a) a man by that name (b) Tennyson in his idle moments (c) S. A. King (d) the little Lambs (e) Alma Mater (S).

(5) How do you account for Edgar A. Guest?
   Ans. The New Deal (F) or the whimsy of nature (S).

Section IV: MUSIC AND ART

(1) How is music like a fish?
   Ans. In "Finlandia" (S).

(2) Wouldn't it have been fun to have known Michael Angelo?
   Ans. No. It would have been too strenuous (S).

(3) Could you whistle the sextette from "Lucia" in a crowded subway car on Saturday afternoon? or Criticize the background of the Sistine Madonna.
   Ans. No, only a sixth of it (S).

(4) What is meant by (a) perfect pitch (b) dominant seventh (c) Cab Calloway (d) Beethoven's tenth Symphony?

(5) How would you characterize the music of Richard Wagner to a deaf person? (Gesture permitted.)
   Ans. Pound on his ear with a hammer (S) or use physical violence (F).

(6) If there had been no Renaissance what would fill up all the art galleries in Europe?
   Ans. Tourists (S).
SONNET FROM THE WEARY

When we consider how four years were spent
Going and coming, Winter, Spring and Fall
Between our rooms, the Lib, and Taylor Hall,
Our feet scuffing the paths where others went;
Or how we often made the sheer ascent
Up from the hockey fields, or from a call
Along the royal Row; or count up all
The many times our steps were Villwards bent,—
When we have reckoned up the miles by score
We must have walked in broadening the mind,
We wonder how the thoughtful any more
A "sedentary life" in college find,
And if in irony the Calendar conspired
To state "two years of exercise required".
NOW WE WERE '36

(The scene is any room in Bryn Mawr College, thirty years hence, miscellaneously furnished and not too neat, for human nature seldom changes. The time is between May and June. Noises of female voices singing songs they have not sung for many years come floating through the open windows. A member of the class of 1966 is opening the door to the matronly figure of one who enters eagerly despite the fact that her hair is noticeably grey. She seems friendly and prepared to talk a great deal, though we are sure that at home she is always circumspect in her conversation.)

THE GUEST: I hope I wasn’t interrupting you but I did so want to see this room.

1966: NO: I mean, yes; I’m a Senior.

THE GUEST [delighted]: Well can you imagine that! You’re in the class of ’66. It sounds perfectly unbelievable. Now we were ’36. I suppose it is hard for you to believe that, but, you know, thirty years doesn’t seem like any time at all when I come back; college is always the same I find . . . [She has been looking around as she talks and now scents something strange as the “not-in-my-day” expression on her face indicates] . . . Oh, this room looks entirely different. They’ve done something to the window seat, or is it that built-in bookcase? You don’t mind if I look around do you? ’66 would like to answer politely but there is no time for more than an unprintable murmur. ’36 has begun to reminisce! I used to live right here in this room, or perhaps it was the one down the hall, and Biffy lived here . . . No this is right, because I remember it was so convenient to the fire buckets in the middle of the night and I never had to get out of bed till . . . but there aren’t any buckets now!

1966 [at last]: Oh we don’t have Fire Drills any more the way you used to.

1936 (who really does know all about B. M. C. for she keeps up with things): Oh of course, I remember reading in the News that some one had invented a way of making the halls fireproof but I never thought they’d get around to doing anything about it. I remember the buckets, though, the last time I was here and that was in . . . well now, just when was it? (It is deep reminiscence now. ’66 looks hopefully at a chair, but ’36 is off again.) IT wasn’t our fifth reunion I know, and the next time Tommy was having the measles so I couldn’t make it. It must have been when they were laying the cornerstone for the new Science Building. That was almost as impressive as the Fiftieth Anniversary.

1966 [seizing a moment which has been left open for How-Time-Flies business]: Won’t you sit down here on the window seat (almost apologetically). It has a new cushion.

1936 [sitting but not stopping]: You can’t imagine how it used to be with all the Sciences in one building, Dalton Hall. It used to be over there where that flat sort of building is now. I miss it, though we used to make dreadful fun of it. What is that new thing?

1966: Well it isn’t very new; at least it was here when I came. That is the Model Theatre for the Play Construction Course. It’s a lot . . . .

1936 [this is her reunion, don’t forget]: In my day we used to give all our plays in Goodhart and had to take turns with the visiting lecturers at that. I can’t get used to all these new buildings. Do you know, they uprooted our class tree to make room for a new wing to the Library! I’m afraid they don’t respect the old traditions as much as we did. Yet it does look attractive, especially with those two new dormitories across the street. (Her gaze is caught by something out of the window.) Heavens, look at those girls, with next to nothing on! I hope they don’t always dress like that. In my time we were considered revolutionary when we wore socks all winter and occasionally appeared in shorts; but this is positively freakish.
1966 (being kind, and lighting a cigarette to pass the time): We don't do it all the time but we like to be comfortable.

1936: What are you doing? Don't tell me they let you smoke in your rooms now! ('66 nods.) Well I never thought that would happen. That wasn't the way when I was here. (As '66 can't help smiling pityingly, '36 rises to the defense.) I suppose you think we never had any fun at all. It may not have been on the same scale as yours, but let me tell you about the time Biffy and Miggles and Tippy and I . . . (Now she has really launched herself and it is evidently going to be a long session, but fortunately we can say—Curtain).
OWED TO THE WEST WIND

I've had the same room all four years while I have been at College.
It's been, I'm sure, inspiration pure in my pursuit of knowledge.
It faces west all afternoon, the sun is warm and dancing,
And twilight glow through my window is beauty most entrancing.
Of course the wind blows on that side as well as any other,
And stormy rains beat on my panes, which is a beastly bother;
For lack of weather-stripping I've to dodge the drafts quite nimbly,
And northern gales do chase their tales both up and down my chimbly.
So when I rise at break of day, braving my arctic frozure,
While others lie so comfortably in warm eastern exposure,
I often think it might have been a little more transcending—
To have my sun when day's begun, rather than when it's ending!

ARE YOU A LIBERAL?

Bryn Mawr girls enjoy talking about their liberal attitude. They claim to be open minded and progressive.

But there is a surprising tendency to base such claims upon information gleaned from America’s most conservative newspapers.

Philadelphia boasts America’s leading liberal newspaper, the Philadelphia Record. Its editorial page is the most quoted in the country. Four great wire services, Associated Press, United Press, Universal News Service and Agence Havas feed the Record a complete story of world events.

The Record stands first in America in number of ranking daily and Sunday columnists. Among these are Heywood Broun, O. O. McIntyre, Robert Allen and Drew Pearson, Herschel Brickell and Leonard Lyons.

If you are a dyed-in-the-wool conservative, if you believe that all's well in the world, if you oppose any change . . . then the Philadelphia Record will not interest you.

But if you are young, liberal and progressive, if you believe that America can be made a better place in which to live and want to take part in such work . . . Then you owe it to yourself to read America's leading liberal newspaper—

WE STICK TO OUR KNITTING

The name Beck is not, and never has been, tied up to any one process of color photography. We are engravers—practical interpreters of color—not solicitors of camera color work. This means that you can rely upon us to make the finest reproductions from any kind of copy. Personal aptitude for engraving in color is the first need of every process, and that is what we have to sell—and that only. Therefore, we shall continue to look upon the entire field of color photography as distinctly separate from ours. The engraver's job is to get color to press with plates that satisfy all concerned—the advertiser, the agency, the artist-photographer who made the original, and the printer. Some order—and quite enough to guarantee our concentration on engraving. The value of this policy to you is that it has developed an expertness on our part which fears no lack of effectiveness in the final engraving. All we ask is the chance to make it.
