PRESIDENT EMERITUS THOMAS, WHO RETURNED TO THE DEANERY TODAY

DR. PINCKNEY HILL DISCUSSES NEGRO PROBLEM IN AMERICA

History of Negro a Struggle Against Great Obstacles

The negro problem in America was the subject of the speech made by Dr. Pinckney Hill, president of the Negro Training School at Cheyney, to the Liberal Club in the Graduate Club Room in Doebney Hall on October 30.

Dr. Hill began by a general history of freedom and the negro. The Ten Commandments, the Sermon on the Mount, the Declaration of Independence, and the Constitution of the United States are the most important documents of the world, according to him, as they are the great declarations of liberty and independence, and augment and advance the sum total of human well-being. He added that scholars everywhere have said that the negro problem will not be solved until the negro has the same rights as the white man.

The negro problem is a national problem, and the negro must be given the same rights as the white man. The negro must be given the same opportunities as the white man.

DR. FITCH LECTURES ON PRIMITIVE RELIGIONS

Totematist and Animistic Theories of Religious Development

Primitive religions was the subject of the lecture given by Dr. Albert Parker Fitch, former Professor of Comparative Religions at Amherst College, in Taylor Hall, last Wednesday night. This lecture was the first of a series of six which Dr. Fitch will give on the general topic of Comparative Religions.

Doctor Fitch began by stating three general assumptions which will underlie the entire course: First, religion is not supernatural or revealed from without, but is a spontaneous and universal expression of human beings. "Human religion and all religions proceed from the simple to the complex, from the superstitious to the ever more refined and intelligent. There is no static religion. In dealing with religions...

GERMANTOWN TIES VAR-SITY IN STIFF CONTEST

Defense Plays Well and Uses Oblique Defense to Oppose

Fast Forwards

M. FARIES STARS AT CENTER

Varsity's first really difficult boyfriend game this year, played against the Germantown Cricket Club, ended last Saturday in a tie of three all.

The game was a stiff one, against excellent opponents, and Bryn Mawr came up to scratch, playing remarkably well. For the first time this year, it was apparent to all that the team was a co-ordinated intelligent unit, rather than a collection of extraneous and individual parts. Up against a fast-forward line, the backs kept their line defense, interchanged without the aid of delayed passes, and passed in a more effective blockage against the advancing forwards. Their tackling and lunging was excellent: The forwards were held to a magnificent pitch by the work largely of 31-Faries, 24, who played for the prettiest and most indomitable game seen at college this year.

Two key goals were shot by D. Lee, 23, who also played her best. 24, made twenty side dives down the field with the ball, but her inner muddled her passes, with elaborate Nikola efforts, and Miss Faries ran for nothing but exhaustion. M. Faries, 24, showed the effect of experience in a game which saw nothing of her swiftness and dash by being far more skillful and less individualistic.

All the back play was well. Sylvia Walker, 27, marked her man closely throughout the two halves, and it was due to this, rather than anything on Miss Weiser's part, that the latter did not make an overwhelming score. Sue Walker placed perhaps the most intelligent of anyone on the field, with the splendid exception of 31 Faries, and she was never seen out of her position. M. Bichanak, by her superior speed, and a decision which she has not shown before, scored a number of goals by crossing in from the wing and lunging to stop Miss Weiser's run.

RUBBER HORSES INTRODUCED IN POOL AS NEW SPORT

A new sport has arrived at College in the form of rubber horses for racing in the pool. They were imported from England by Miss Applebee and are the first ones to be used in America.

They are excellent for pofture, according to Miss Applebee, also for balance and control. Miss Trelavan holds the record for riding an animal the length of the pool. They are of rubber, vaguely resembling a horse, and are extremely light. They are used in the swimming pool as a race. The Bryn Mawr steeds are to be used for races and lifiting, not in the swimming meet, but purely for amusement.

The QUALITY OF FIGURES

College men attain wealth proportionately more rapidly than college women, according to the investigations of a Western College president. Gradually the proportion increases.

A seat in the National Home of Representatives is attained 3.2 times as often as in the National Senate; 3.9 times as often, and the presidency 1.19 times as often. Aside from their abstract interests these figures might afford very solid comfort to youth enrolling in college or considering entering the ministry. In college, perhaps in later years, even college women, may take comfort from the knowledge that if all other livelihoods should fail, there is always the presidency to fall back upon.

Editors do not hold themselves responsible for opinions expressed in this column.

A HELPING HAND

In college we are seldom asked to contribute money to the general funds of our college. Frequently we are asked to contribute our time in order to offer our assistance in some capacity. In college, we graduate will we fully realize what a large amount of money it is necessary for the Alumnae to raise every year. Even if we did it would hardly be possible for us to collect funds. We are asked to contribute our time, to be offered an opportunity to help them. On Friday night the Alumnae of this district are giving, under their auspices, a concert for the benefit of the Regional Scholarship Fund, which makes it possible for one to enter college every year and receive support during her four years of study.

HALL TEAS

One of the delightful, and as far as we know, unique customs of Bryn Mawr College is that of hall teas. In a small community such as this they afford an excellent means of becoming acquainted with one another and of helping one another. The advantage in the past has been their expense. This year, in order to remedy this, the schedule for the teas has been considerably altered. They will take place twelve weeks in all, instead of six weeks of last year, and will be omitted those weeks, such as Thanksgiving week, when only one or two halls have them. However, they now begin three weeks earlier than they began last year. By limiting the number of teas, it is possible for residents of a hall to ask as many of their friends as they please, rather than to be allowed to ask only one guest. One of the chief advantages of hall teas promises to be as popular as the old.

Tickets for the concert to be given, Friday evening, November 9, at 8.30 o'clock, in the Academy of Music, for the benefit of the Regional Scholarships Fund, under the auspices of the Bryn Mawr College Alumnae Clubs of Pennsylvania and Delaware, are on sale to all students at half price, $1.00, in the Public Office. To give an advantage to the Morning and the Alumnae Office in the afternoon.

MUSIC SCHOOL COMMITTEE REPORT—BULLETIN

A statement of the Music School Committee is in the November Bulletin gives a brief review of the history and aims of the school.

The resolutions of the meeting held last May state:

1. That the Committee waives, for the next few years, its right of objection <<<ANON>>

2. That the Committee pledges its activities for the financing of the Department for, next year only.

3. That the Committee will press at the next meeting the Alumnae Association to report its report of the Department of Music with the request for the near completion of the College co-operation in the College, which is essential for the continuation of the Department, and their permission to undertake a Campaign for Endowment.

And the report closes with the remarks that, "A fair demonstration of the value of the Music School will be the verification of the resolutions. If it continue, the Committee hopes that its status may be changed. It is still extra. Much work is required before it may be taken as a major by the students, although separate courses may be entered and count toward a degree. It can be given in case of other departments by making it a subject group, and if it is approved and well taught it would be a great service in the College, otherwise that it should be discontinued."

I. The religious ideas their strength and mortality is that they are absolutely natural.

There are two definitions of religion, said Dr. Filch, the first being “man’s relation to the whole nature of things.” The second is that man and relate themselves to the cosmos are religious, and only those who feel no need of relationship to the whole are not religious. The second definition is the one generally assumed, that religion is a “belief in spiritual beings.” Although most men believe in spiritual beings, any man is religious who conceives an ultimate relationship to the whole.

Theories as to the origin of religions are of two main schools, the animistic and the totemistic. Those who support the former maintain that man came to “believe in spirits through the spontaneous individual reactions of primitive man on his world.” One cause for this was man’s precarity existence, in which forces of nature seemed whimsical and whimsical. He was either afraid, or in awe of the world. Moreover, he attributed life to inanimate objects, seeking to interpret nature in terms of his own experience. Dreams, dauntheness, death, made him believe in dualism, that man is composed of two elements, now indistinguishable, but not inseparable. Still higher causes for this belief in spirits were reflection on the origin of things and man’s ethical dualism, the need of deliverance from himself.

The newer theory of religious development is totemistic, that religion is the symbol of social values, the outward sign of group interests. The gregarious instinct, according to this theory, was responsible for totemism. In the phenomena of the group, God was a name for worldwide human consciousness, “a symbol of social values.” The notion of one God does not arise before monarchy. What the savage thought of as an outside spirit was really in psychology, such as one sees in a Hilly Sunday meeting.

With this totemistic theory, however, Doctor Filch said that he himself did not agree. He believes that although man gets much from social qualities, the real source of religion is individual. “The great religious leaders have received their inspiration in solitude,” while profoundly religious people are essentially solitary.

Spiritual Disintegration of World Needs Simplicity and Unselfishness

Provincialism, its glory and its dangers, was the subject of the sermon delivered by Dr. Albert Parker Fisher, former Pro- fessor of Comparative Religion at Am- hersh College; in chapel last Sunday. Mr. Fisher, speaking from the Old Testament stories. In the story from Kgaz that he read, the country was saved by the “burning of the princes of the provinces.” Over and over again, in his- tory, the world has been saved by young men and women from the provinces, who have not suffered from an effect civiliza- tion, a civilization which so often destroys its makers. Examples of these princes of the provinces range from Joseph, the dreamy shepherd boy who saved Egypt, to Lincoln, or Joan of Arc, and, greatest of all provincials, to Christ, a man born in humble life, in a province of mixed blood, who became the greatest leader of mankind.

It is the provinces of the provincials who make the world today, a world of two, conflicting tendencies, the physical and ex- ternal integration brought by science, and, yet, men seeking, the instinctual and spiritual disintegration, shown in the ter- rible, renaissance of nationalism, class-consciousness, and race hatreds. But these princes who try to save cannot be “provincial” as we now understand the word. They cannot be intellectually pro- vincial, feeling themselves different from other men. There is no sounding, no generous acting, or high willing, behind that kind of provincialism.

Nor is provincialism feeling a provincial trait. We calculate the sentimental, whose feeling is out of all-proportion to the thing which inspires it, and yet the reason why we have so little feeling for our fellowmen is because we expend it upon these very things. The sensualist, too, loving feeling for feeling’s sake, is one of the most “Gready provincial”. The princes who saved men and women from their own nation, re- believed and rewarded without destroying. Great men and women have always been simple and unselfish, and great wisely to see themselves as a part of their race, to throw themselves into a great cause without res- ervations. This is the provincialism that is infinitely precious. The greatest office a college man can do is to send out princes who will show in this way that they are the people from the provinces.

How I Improved My Line in One Evening!

Dear Editor:

I am sending you the two photographs above." They tell the re- markable story of what you have done for me. The first one was taken just after I had recklessly supposed that the Ponte Rialto had something to do with Architecture. The two women are engaged in looking for the Torricellian vacuum. . . Now just look at the second picture, and see, the difference! My social success is at last assured, for I am now a regular reader of VANITY FAIR.

Indebtedly yours,

GERMANTOWN TIES VARSITY IN STIFF CONTEST

Dr. Tennon, Professor of Biology, ad- dressed an informal meeting of the Science Club, on Tuesday, October 30, on his work on the fertilization of the echinoderm egg, which he carried on in Japan last year.

The Marine laboratory of the Imperial University of Tokyo was at his disposal, as it was favorable on account of the numerous species of sea urchins to be found nearby. He was joined there by many scientists who were interested in his great project.

He told first of the general principles of fertilization, and the low percentage of eggs developed without an artificial aid to activation, which usually took the form of 3 chemical. Even after fertilization has taken place there are three obstacles, known as blocks, which may interfere with successful development.

A detailed account of one experiment was de- tailed, which established the fact that the degree of permeability of the egg-mem- brane was proportional.

STUDENT FRIENDSHIP FUND AID'S STUDENTS MATERIALLY

Organization Endeavors to Extend Aid to Refugee Students

John R. Stott, chairman of the Student Friendship Fund for European Student Relief, issued a report today showing that the organization has aided 305,000 needy students in seventeen countries.

Supported in large measure by America through the Student Friendship Fund, it has supplied these students with food, clothing, books, living quarters and medical care. Without this help thousands would have been obliged to give up their university careers.

The report states: "In the three years that the European Student Relief has been operating, it has furnished 72,524,345 meals, 46,857 articles of clothing, 148,318 towels, 437 tons of coal. It has brought relief to students in 200 institutions of higher learning in Russia, Central Europe, Asia Minor, Finland, and to refugee students in Great Britain, France, Greece, Switzerland and the United States.

"Many of the students came to the university in the (all) absolutely without funds. To provide food, the European Student Relief established agencies which have been manned and operated entirely by students. Because of limited funds, there are 30,000 Russian students who have been receiving only one meal a day. For thousands whose relief is needed, that represents all they have to eat."

The organization has been trying to extend its aid to refugee students. There are approximately 30,000 of them in Europe, largely Jewish and Non-Jewish. They represent the most pitiful of Europe's poverty-stricken students.

"In addition to providing the necessities of life for 105,000 out of a total student population of 500,000 the European Student Relief had been developing self-help bureaus which assist students in finding work. Many students work from eight to ten hours a day as common laborers in addition to carrying on their studies. They work in laundries, factories, mines, barber shops, bookbinderies and on farms."

"Originally it had been planned to withdraw this year, since the majority have become self-supporting. The instability of currency however, has made this impossible. Hundreds who worked throughout the summer to get enough money to carry them through the year had their savings practically wiped out by the latest monotonous move in money value. If we did not stay, they would be obliged to withdraw from the universities, depriving Europe of doctors, engineers and other professional workers which it so desperately needs.
