Miss McBride, Touring in West, Feted By Alumnae From Texas

by Emily Townsend, '56

At the University of Texas Miss McBride is a guest of the Texas Alumnae Association. And a product of the University of Pennsylvania, she found "a very strong contin- uation of 'The Legend of Sleepy Hollow,' and a very good piece of the Bantam alms ma- ter." However, Miss McBride re- ports a positive reaction from the western matrons who grilled on their daughter's return to New York. And she didn't have any trouble getting into Bryn Mawr, she says, because she "talked the Texas humor into just fine," said McBride.

The visiting ten cities in twenty days, Miss McBride found her re- ceptions in the afternoon were high points. In Performance introduction and notes The Steph' or distinguished by the talented playing and Beethoven's Sonata for Cello and piano, the red staircase and overtook the "once and the red plaid scarf."

She urged the students to consult with people for clerical and stenographic abilities in various agencies and this is an excellent way to learn the workings of the government. Competitive examina- tions are given at various times during the year. There also are opportunities for those who want to work with children in the Wel- fem's Junior High School. Mrs. Pennell mentioned the need for a support of 16 votes were returned filled. Kenyon Blaze Makes Bryn Mawrverts Worry

To the Editor:
The recent disastrous fire at Kenyon College shocked all of us, but I am not surprised when one considers the hazardous historical firetrap in which most students are housed. The Kenyon dormitory house, one of whom managed to escape blocked exits and inrescuable fires. We consider it an act of God that no one's equipment safe; the fire spread rapidly through the old building, leaving nothing but a charred stone skeleton after a short three hours. For a while, we're not so quickly like a Bryn Mawr setting!
The majority of the dorms here, like Kenyon, are old traditional buildings primarily with wood inside—a dangerous trap which we've been saved from so far. We all realize this, yet we seem to have the infallible belief that nothing could possibly happen to us—despite having no lack of incendiaries and fire- and fire-fighting equipment.
Two and a half years ago, work was begun and removed the clanking and cracking fire hoses (vivace c. fermata) from the library. Since then nothing new has been added. Forlorn, turned-off water faucet in the hallway, we have no fire equipment to testify to our simple-mindedness.
According to the form of 80 students existing equipment consists of two ten-second fire hoses and no sprinklers at all. Adequate protection against fire is a must to avert a possible tragedy. Students should know how to use it. Fire drills are no solution.
