Krech Discusses Bombing Effects On German People

"Bombards denounce people in spite of what the press generally says about London," stated Mr. David Krech, head of the psychology department, in discussing his experiences in making a psychological study of German civilians. He has been one of the foremost Germanists based on the American definition of civilization, which involves personal initiative, but to a Nazi high moral morale means the complete willingness to obey orders. The majority of the German people feel responsible for the actions of their leaders. If we wish to pre-

Self-Gov't. Rules Passed in Halls Take Precautions

All but one of the revisions to the rules which the Self-Government Executive Board proposed in their last meeting were passed by a majority of a quorum in each hall. The exception was the one that forbade going to and from the halls either day or night in groups. The application of the rule varies greatly, but very few individuals are caught in the net.

Two permanent revisions were made. First, it was no longer necessary for residents to register themselves with a faculty member before going to any special events. Second, the requirement that students be present for all regular meetings is abolished completely.

Individual comment on the provisions to the present number must necessarily be very brief. In the face of the need for a firm basis as a refiner into the spirit of the hall the student is not to be under-estimated. None the less, one feels somewhat concerned at the denial of the desire for participation in the private concerns of the other students. Two houses only are among a large number of groups which do not seem to have any active interest in the rules which govern them.

The Board wishes to make clear that the danger of the present emergency must be realized by every individual, and that strongly in the judgment of the Board the students take the necessary measures as a matter of clarification and emergency. The new rule which prohibits less than two students from going into the field dark is to be interpreted meaning a minimum of two, but this requirement is not applicable to larger groups whenever possible.

The permanent provisions were passed almost unanimously and merely concern activities which will be difficult to conform with when they are in effect. The changes were to make the rules consistent with general policies of the Board and the rest of the rule book.

Choir to Sing With Princeton

The Byrn Mawr and Princeton choirs will sing in a Christmas Vesper service, held this Sunday at the Princeton chapel and here in Goodhart Chapel the day after, on the 18th.

The program is to be a varied one, to include songs especially written by the orchestra, Bach's 12th cantata, and choruses sung by the combined groups from both colleges, and, finally, four European carols, pre nied by Byrn Mawr Dr. Weinrich, conductor of the Alumni Chorus, while Mrs. de Vernon will lead the two student choirs. Two teams, leaving Penn at 11:00, will include the participating choirs in Franklin, where they will rehearse and have lunch. The choirs will return at 10:00 in the afternoon, dinner at 6:00 and the service will start back at 8:00.

Mr. Mrs. Grant to Join State Dept. Resigns Position as B. M. Dean

Will Be Specialist on Near Eastern Affairs: Cape Long Study of History and Politics of Balkans, Iran, Syria, Palestine

Mrs. Christine Grant, Dean of the College, has just announced her resignation effective January 1, to assume the role of a special assistant to the Secretary of Near Eastern Affairs. Although no permanent appointments have been made, a final decision is to be announced at a later date. The decision to resign was made in order to return to full-time faculty work for the next academic year.

Mrs. Grant, who has been Dean at Byrn Mawr since 1942 "refused to accept the offer," according to college officials. Mrs. Grant has enjoyed three years more than she has here," said one college official.

Nahm Treats Art As Communication in Cultural Field

Common Room, November 8th. Reading a paper on "Art and Communication," Mr. Nahm emphasized the power of art as an instrument to promote understanding among people. The paper was presented in an effort to communicate the value of art in forging a bridge between different cultures and backgrounds.

A common ground for philosophy and art is found in the idea of unity. Nahm pointed out. The essence of art is to point out the unity of the human experience. The paper's aim is to use art as a means to foster understanding and to promote peace.

The program will range from the work of the Burgundy portraitists to the art of Toil. In "Hymns In Praise of Toil," the artist's feelings are objectified in a special way that the artist finds true for himself. The program will be presented in the form of a series of lectures, each focusing on a different aspect of art and its role in communicating the human experience.

Characterizations, Humor, Irony, Lines Enliven "Family Portrait"

Despite its theme Family Portrait is not only to be 'demonstrated in the highly enjoyable, and many amusing situations and clever characterizations the story of the god of many others, but the results are introspective and the important aspects of life are introduced immediately in the form of Joseph, Jesus brother, a young and charming family portrait. It tells a story of one life, told in its honesty and truth. The line work is highly detailed and the effect is a high level of precision that the artist finds true for himself.

Mrs. Crenshaw Writes To Express Protest Against Idolatry

To the Editor:

After your blast of last week, may I be permitted a mild counterblast to your last two columns before you had the last word of your last column before you, which I am delighted that you wrote your editorial this time, too.

Our offer of free work is a well known service. We are the best and the last to deny them of some things.

You say that your positions are principally from the eastern area. They are and probably always will be. However, if we can get some work on to try to do better in other parts of the country. The Seven Wonders of the World, for instance, have already asked colleges in the West, the North and the Midwest to join them in a pool of information about positions.

You say that we get few interesting positions for beginners. We have more often made the common, not the common, mistakes. I am sorry to tell you that, with the end of the war, we shall probably have very few positions to fill. Positions that are not run-out-of-the-window are usually filled from within or by appointment through invisible channels or a fortunate inter-This can be sure and our hope is that they have all the patience which they said they have the right to ask.

Wide Range

However, when you say that we get very interesting positions for beginners, let me say that last year we heard that we must get the government through the army. To get the government through the army, the agencies, the armed forces, OSRD projects, industries, "laboratories of the present" are selling many kinds of medical services of many kinds, technical, news, newspapers, magazines, publishing house, advertising agencies, writers, photographers, books, houses, insurance companies, brokerage firms, market research organizations, un- ern, libraries, museums, radio stations, railroads, travel bureaus, airline companies, advertising agencies, associations, committees, radio and television, insurance, business firms, summer camps, and private individuals.

Mr. Crenshaw writes to express protest against idolatry.

Grant Discusses Palestine Issues

Goodhart, Dec. 1: "It would be impossible to force a Zionist state on a community in Palestine that was still populated by a majority of Arabs," said Mr. Grant, discussing "The Future Place of Palestine in the Arab East" for the United Nations Council in the Common Room.

The modern problem arises, Mr. Grant emphasized, from the dissolution of the Turkish Empire, which recognized the Arab aspirations for independence, and at the same time arranged for Jewish and Arab political leaders to be governed by the man of an Arab from Hong Kong to the States. Nellie Bly finishes as the winner by the generosity of Gaston. As the completely befuddled Phineas Fogarty, Victor Moore 1923 leaves the part completely oblivious to the poor assistance he received from a grammarian. Gaston Maxwell '24 acts well, but doesn't sing well. The spoken and the vivacity of the show are completely contributed by Lubbock Roudenko; refuge of the interests of the next generation of an Arab country.

The possibilities of a bi-national country were reviewed by the years of peace between 1920 and 1922 when Jewish enterprise introduced new agricultural and industrial techniques, immensely improving the economic conditions of the country. The present population difficulties became precipitated when the immigration of Jews rose from 1,989 per year in the early 1920s to 1,000,000 in 1923, producing a state of strain and hostility among the Arabs. The Arab League maintained that Jewish political ambitions are fantastic, and demands that the western democracies put a curb on their expansion.

Authors Offered Prizes, Subsidies

Two new opportunities have been opened for recognition in literary fields. Simon and Shuster has written to the English department describing "The Venture Prizes, which is the imprint under which Simon and Shuster publishes the work of talented young, that is, previously unpublished writers." Encouraging all inquiries from those interested in writing novels, the publishers also described their fund to "subsidize writers under 30 years of age." Applications may be made for the Young Author's Prize by writing directly to Simon and Schuster. Tomorrow: Ma attie will sponsor a $1000 prize contest to an officially enrolled college student. The best story short and the best article will receive a prize of $500; while the second prize in both categories will be $250. Choice of subject is left entirely up to the contestant. The contest ends May 1, 1947.

Theme of Dance 'City at Midnight'

'The City at Midnight' will be the theme of the undergraduate Christmas dance to be given in the gymnasium on Saturday, December 1, from 10:30 to 2:30. The dance will follow the production of Farm's Portrak, directed by Meigs and presented by the Bryn Mawr Players Club and the Pembroke Cap and Bells Club. The theme of Dance 'City at Midnight' will be featured. The two short poems, Miss Roads and Summer Night, containing in their form and the appropriate movement of their rhythm, will provide a perfect creation to a fine ballad suite. The dances, which will be performed, are presented, critically viewed and appraised. It may be a matter of personal opinion, but it seems that this discussion of a new development in poetry, a distinction written by those of the generation who are to be the largest readers and masters of poetry in a new age, quickens on not only to interest but to excitement.

Meigs Recommends Title Broaden's cope

Adequate discussion of the finely discriminating paper on Virginia Woolf would not be possible here. Certainly one of the excellent missions of The Title is to bring critical writing of this sort beyond the door of its immediate class range. In the review of Money on Blue, Karl Shapiro's ideas on new poetry are presented, critically viewed and appraised. It may be a matter of personal opinion, but it seems that this discussion of a new development in poetry, a distinction written by those of the generation who are to be the largest readers and masters of poetry in a new age, quickens one not only to interest but to excitement.
