The back of encyclopedias do it too, but the Main Catalogue in the library at Bryn Mawr is wild thoughts through my head. I'd hate to think of the main catalogue at home. I used to love the end of the catalogue, the last ten letters of the whole damn thing. It's a real thrill to have all the letters at one place. NSA Discusses Plans for Local Foreign Projects

The highlight of the Regional NSA Convention was a discussion about the government in labor policies and the role of the National Student Association. Miss Florence Peterson, at Current Events.

January 5: "The Taft-Hartley Bill introduces a change about the creation of a labor-management committee to be elected by the workers and the management. This new body is to be responsible for the formulation of labor policies and the settlement of labor disputes."

Current Events

January 12: "China's ancient traditions and culture were celebrated. Dr. Augusta Wauger, associate professor of English at Bryn Mawr College and former professor of Economics at Yenching University, spoke on the topic."

Dr. Wauger explained that it is difficult for her to predict the future towards China because China is split within itself. Nearly all the people have a different opinion even under the best conditions. Since the diplomatic situation in China is so desperate, it is very difficult that she maintain peace, but it is necessary that the rule of law and order to stop off that strife keeps breaking free."

History of China

Dr. Wauger gave a brief history of China since 1911, showing that there has been diversity ever since Sun Yat-sen over the left and the right.

The two contending parties, the Nationalists under Chiang Kai-shek, and the Communists formed a truce from 1937-1944 in order to join forces against the Japanese. Now they have come in new mass organizations at war with each other once more.

The Nationalists had a chance of uniting China under Chiang Kai-shek, but they muted it by the Chinese Communists. Northern China, the former Japanese stronghold, Chiang Kai-Shek was obligad to march into the effort for national advancement, and new taxation and conscription in order to push the country forward. Now he feels once more, but the result was only inflation and economic disaster.

Little Hope

There is now almost no hope of reconciling the two parties. Dr. Wauger was3d that "China's ancient traditions and culture were celebrated."

For the many colleges and univer-real student government, the Clinic will act in an advisory ca-ultimately, it is hoped, will draw

Sleighs, Snow, Skis, Stowe
Will Highlight Winter Sports

There are plans afoot in the gym department to hitch old Dobbin to the sleigh once more and "jingle bell" through the snow-bound countryside. Miss Yeager is on the track of a stable that will be rea-sable about prices and also one that will provide large enough sleighs to make it a very sensible venture.

Every possible use is being made of the snow and icy blasts. So far have signed up for the skiing trip the week-end after exams Some are dreading planning to fling themselves off a nearby cliff, it, but sure of having failed every exam.
The rest are just going for a spill and a jaunt. The group is bound for Stowe, Vt., where they hope to stay at State Lodge.

The indoor sports are now in full swing. The varieties are being offered in their first encounter with neighboring teams. The schedules for the basketball, badminton and swimming teams all include six games or meets, three at home and three away.

This varied program of winter sports is imposed upon by individuals who take their leads and jump into parked cars. Also, there seems to be plenty of opportunity for future Sonia Henies at the various neighboring skating clubs.

Good things, frudging up to Taylor

DeLaguna Talks
On Man, Society

"There is a close relationship between man as a thinking being and man as a social being," declared Mrs. Theodore de Laguna, Professor Emeritus of Philosophy at Bryn Mawr, in a lecture to the Philosophy Club on "Culture and Nationalism." January 7. Man's solicitous influence is in him that it requires his constant adaptation is so. She continued.

Mrs. de Laguna defined Culture as "the prototype" of the activity of man's thinking being. Through the adaptation to his society, he begins to think as a universal being, as well as an individual. The stimulus of the culture draws him out and is a challenge to his universal inclinations.

Debate Victory
Phyllis Bolton, '49, and Betty Curran, '49, represented Bryn Mawr at a debate with St. Joseph's College, January 8. They supported the negative of the resolution "That a World Federal Government Should Be Established," defeating the opposing team, thus making the debate Club's score for the season, five victories out of six.

Leap-Year Dance
Save the week-end of February 28 for Freshman Show and the Leap-Year dance following. A highlight of the dance will be songs by the "Naasona," ten Princeton men, while "the Pennmen" will play. Other activities are also being planned to make the entire week-end a gala affair.

Chorus Broadcast
The Bryn Mawr Chorus performed a program of sacred music and carols over station WIBG this afternoon. Jean Swindick, '48, served as announcer and Mr. Robert Goodale as conductor.

Any one interested in working on the Undergrad Dance in any capacity, please contact Ann Eberhardt, Penn East.

Play Contest
The Dramatics' Alliance of Stanford University announces the 22th annual competition for awards in dramatic writing. There are several prizes of $100 each. Best plays and articles will be recommended to community and college theatres and to established periodicals. This contest closes February 26.

What To Do
Summer jobs are already coming.
If you are considering taking a job this summer, here are some things to think about.

"Encounter" Art Night will take place on Friday night, April 16 and will have "Encounter" as a central theme. An invitation to take part has been extended to all art and language groups on campus. All interested are welcome and should get in touch with Pat Hochendish, in Wyndham. Pat was elected producer for Art Night at a meeting of the Art Night Committee on Monday afternoon.
