Mr. Hughes LeBlanc Alleviates Intense Pitch Pervading The Shoemaker's Prodigious Wife

Bettman Contributions

High Emotion

As Wife

by Sheila Atkinson, '53

"I want to come out! You let me out!" shouted the shoemaker's prodigious wife, Linda Bettman, from off stage. And come out she did. "It's a good thing you ran into your house, you dusty little snail, because if you hadn't, I'd have dragged you through the streets by the hair," she screamed out the window as her gold sandals stomped across the stage.

She raged furiously; she was equally convincing trying to be tender with the boy, Sandra Davis, and whimsically recalling her past suitors much to the disgust of her lower husband. She threw herself into the role wholeheartedly and at the end of the performance she had a pale, dandified eighteen-year-old wife, whose cold clap spoused ran away to uncared for during the performance.

Hughes LeBlanc, the shoemaker, the meek, the mild-tempered, the sweet, provided the necessary cutout to the outbreaks of his disconsolate wife. His easy-going manner furnished welcome relief from the tension, his humor pacified the agitated play. His songs and sonnets were delightfully and his plights amusingly pitiful.

Often in play, where there is such a marked distinction between the mutes and the speaker, the latter parts near the level of comic relief supplied by the performers themselves. On the whole, however, this was not the case in the production of "The Shoemaker's Wife." The women neighbors were particularly good with their brightly colored costumes and superbly poised,aisy listeners.

Strict Direction and Fine Acting Grace "Andromaque", French Club Production

especially contributed by

Annie Phillips, '54

Andromaque, given last night in the French Club, was a triumph. Annette Bagard had written a play, a tragedy extricating from three unloves. Ted Morris, assisted by Maurice Gaudefay, directed a long playing, giving it a fourth unity of presentation. They assimilated her ancient enemies Hermione, the king Pyrrhus, and Creusa. Andromandegue, the widow of Hector, survives. The story is simple, the play is both difficult and rewarding.

The directing was strict. Not a hand moved, not an ember raised itself, unbidden. Not a line spoken, not a word written, not a set piece moved, not an alien idea introduced. The gesticulations of the actors had the clarity of the moon, the lighting was spaced, a series of variously elevated shafts.

The scenery and costumes were by Frits Janzchek. There was a disappointing stage with Egyptian tickets, and a set of palms. But the porter of Hector, stilted on a marred pole like a cooking stick on a toothpick, was decoratively and splendidly improved.

Watson Catalogues Four-fooled Resident in Raritain (Faculty Column)

by Edward H. Watson

Officially auring is here, and probably this column can be included with a non-controversial subject, viz., the abolishment of misses. Mr. Worce, was one of the many thousands of the numerous "cultivated" animal types, now that the skull form is associated, only ourselves remain, and it's leave us out. We are too abundant anyhow, and get rather monotonous. We also include the only dangerous and unpleasant individuals.

This listing will not be technical, I am a zoologist—but only include such chance observations as I have made on the campus or very nearly, of the larger and more obvious animals. A botanist or herpetologist might be interested in the list in the break downstairs, but let us skip such minor organisms and proceed with the biggest: I saw a deep heart in the Rumfordian, who did not fail to show the infirmity one individual three years ago. Accidental and the moon, which the story is about the triumph in the nighttime wanderings. One summer, after the tropical lights were turned on, we began to think. I think I went out on my upper porch for a chat in the moonlight, the moon was not more than three, and I saw an opossum walking across the road from Carter's to Brandywine, where he had no home. Skunks are fairly numerous, and are interested in the brook behind the campus. A man with his door open in the moonlight, was seen to have his portrait, commissioned by the Spanish nobleman, express his own inward feelings to the person.

Particularly appreciated by artists, Goya was the subject of interest of all the major French artists and writers. His work knew no national bound in his lifetime. He was famous, admired, and his life was as turbulent and colorful as his work. We tried to make no effort to disguise his feelings, but simply satirized the court in his prints. His was to be to his art, to his Spanish nobleman wife to France, and Byron and Shelley to England. So thoroughly was Mr. Watson overlooked that Goya succeeded and successfully conversed with two ancient masters and writers and English as well, because he had no home. Mr. J. Henry Scatterson Celebrates 25th Year at Bryn Mawr

When I was three and my sister was four years older, my parents, sending us on an errand, entrusted us with just enough money to go to the designated place and return. We went by horse and carriage; we knew in those days the carriage had straw seats, lace curtains and lace curtains. The day was sunny and the weather warm. But on the corner of Front and Market Streets they sold dolls. And how my sister and I loved dolls! We would always be the first to go, and the carriage fare buying days and walk home and treat our family.

It was a long walk, about an hour and a half, but we had our dates. We arrived home late, having caus- ed our dear parents much anxiety. When my father questioned us about our tardiness, we weakly offered by me) to have a den below the house near the main parlor.

Among the mammalian predators only the black squirrel makes a visit. One was "out on a chilly night in the Bethpeum in the late fall" back. The smallest mammals are even less common, a mouse, shrews, moles, squirrels and chipmunks. Several of the last make their nests in the cheery boughs on the woodsides of the campus. Now and then a young rodent will be seen under their well-known name of Chippy Havercorn. Mr. Chew, his henchman, was often seen.

The larger and harmless but valuable and beautiful black snake sometimes slithers beneath rhododendron and rhododendron in the stream there. Last summer the children brought in a box for tea.

In the fall the campus is too small and is being covered by "progress." Only Mr. Bertram's insistent tale supports me: that a black bear was seen on the campus. He must have been fishing in the stream.

The minor characters' costumes lent an air of Spain and huerta life. The stage was designed to show off their brittleness and determination and during the intermission was most entertaining.

French Tragedy Scores

Androumacha, being innocent, wore the first color of yellow, purple, and along with her little girl's rainbow of 1812. Her mini was black and, like a serious woman putting on courage, a yellow and white kid cloak.

The minor parts are hard ones to fill, and I don't believe we have had a chance at a party in whose honor to celebrate his twenty-fifth year with the college.

Mr. Scottagatch, who has just had his seventy-fifth birthday, who used to be a good gardener, and whose twining ambition to keep personality from him. He has been an influence on the world into the world of people, is the financial wizard who has helped Bryn Mawr develop physically into the institution it is today.

He has eliminated the Wyndham debt and has seen Goodhart built and paid for. He has witnessed the additions of Park, the West Wing built of the Library, Rhodes Hall, the Graduate School, and the Scrull property to the campus.

We thank Mr. Scottagatch for his devoted service to the college as a "disinterested citizen" and as friend to the public welfare, disinterested in private gain. We thank him for his twenty-five years of service, strength, and financial insight, for he is one of those remote, ingenious men who hold the purse strings which secure our education.

Campus Interviews on Cigarette Tests
No. 37...THE SWORDFISH

"They had me fencing with fancy facts!"

They crossed swords with the wrong man when they engaged this swashbuckling senior in "combat! At first, he was foiled by the tricky, "one-puff! . . . "one-schniff" cigarette mildness tests. But he parried their thrusts with this gleaming sword of logic: The only way you can judge mildness is by steady smoking. That's the true test of cigarette mildness.

It's the sensible test . . . the 30-Day Camel Mildness Test, which simply asks you to try Camels as your steady smoke, on a day-after-day, pack-after-pack basis. No snap judgments! Once you've tried Camels for 30 days in your "T-Zone" (T for Throat, T for Taste), you'll see why . . .

After all the Mildness Tests . . .

show, and for almost the first time in this year most of the wrestlers were on hand, instead of being bedded by illness. The battle was fierce and second varieties were equally scoreless, and both teams easily won their matches, 8-4 and 4-1 respectively. This confirms the variety's undecided record. All the players were extremely quick and agile, and the matches were a pleasure to watch. The last fencing meet was held but Thursday against the Tyler Art School, in Elkins Park. As usual the varsity bouts were won by Bryn Maw, but unfortunately the J.V. lost 3-4, though each bout was extremely close.

Early lacrosse enthusiasts have been seen tossing balls in the gym or on Merion green, and all those who wish to play will be eagerly welcomed. Anyone interested should see Captain Donny McCorban, or M. C. Warren, the manager.

Above: our classic shirt, $8.95; fared golf skirt with leather tee belt, $12.95. Right: our three-colored jockey shirt, $7.95; side buttoned long shorts, $6.95. All in rainbow-toned, linen weave rayon and cotton, sizes 10 to 18.
