Romans Battle For Gallican' in Classic Play

Goodale Compositions Add Background Of Music
Especially contributed by Mary Taylor, M.A.

Gallicans, a medieval Latin period, but sometimes there is doubt, and shewarn, was performed in the climax in honor of Miss Lily Ross Taylor, May 3rd. The college chorus sang music composed for the play by Mr. Robert L. Goodale.

History, with a woman who lived in the second and third centuries, the first woman who wrote religious dramas to replace the pagan comedies. Gallicans exemplifies the hybrid of Christianity over paganism.

Bard's Eye View
by Ann Shocket, '54

First day as a freshman she said, "I'm just a noob, definitely a noob."
She so excited, so happy, so...well...noob.
An art major, a fine artist.
A desk, a dresser...
That was all.

Looked out in a sunny, casual, happy mood.

Such splendors as met her incredulous eyes.

Hoops and pandemonium.
Candles half burned, broken and without purpose.
How she yearned!

Then May Day: the senior like Santa appears, heh. They have no idea it's only the third day on campus or the longer they go without the last four years.

A cot, a chair, the suite, the room.
A desk, a dresser...
That is all.

The freshman sits smiling with all of the trappings of her identity.
She swallows in wealth with the greatest of pleasure.

The city of Tamaqua was not an outstanding experience.
Saturday night was spent in the Majestic Hotel, "Modern and Moderate" with lovely rooms priced at two dollars, coal dust running from the water faucets, and "Modern White and the Teresa Dwarfs" examining the beds in the morning theater.

The two buses, lowered into the country to remove a chunk of work that had been blasted. Fortunately for a group of coal miners who worked near Tamaqua, the students raised their prices and moved the road five miles.

The tables have turned.

Contest With Russia

What's clear from the professional standpoint, even before the U.S.S.R. is pretty stable, stated Mr. Holland Hunter, in his talk at the panel, "Contest With Russia," held the evening of May 5. He based this comment on the outcome of the Tri-College Conference on "Our Contest with Russia." hunter stated that there was no foreseeable danger of overthrow of the Bolshevik Gov., and that the U.S.S.R. is now at peace with the United States. Hunter concluded that Soviet revolution and, if it is true, only a Communist party could control there. There is general stability in political, economic, and societal conditions.

The United States also seems to have a stable and unlikely to be overthrown. "It is reasonably accurate," said Mr. Hunter, "to state that most of the leadership in the Communist party in this country is composed of misfits." In the meantime, Hunter felt the U.S.S.R. is moderately more discontent, partly caused by the structure of its population. If we were to exert a military spirit there, it would precipitate a World War II. This is one reason to avoid this, it is necessary to help them.

On Our Side

Western Europe is still—quote—"on our side, unquote," Mr. Hunter added. "In a new generation of this dictum that it will remain so." People are still able to affect their own and more at Bryn Mawr. "Parties are the dominant themes in the world. The tables have turned.

Concerning the time dimension of the contest, it will probably continue longer than we like it to be, part, at least, not anywhere. Questions instead of us, as the ideo- logical contest have asked whether this is a struggle of brutality and space or whether we can create an advance of Communist expansion through words or military force. Apparently it is both.

Spiritual Content?

Another question often raised is whether or not the contest is a spiritual content. There is the notion that hating pious groups, caste, social or economic hierarchies, such groups make people turn to Communist, and if that is the case, we are..., better, or, otherwise, are almost passive as the people have been misjudged to them. "The problem," stated Hunter, is "in Communism, in that respect, is a new region, a feeling against these pressures is almost a creed.

It seems that there is no definite United States policy in regard to religion, policy, or the political side, Mr. Hunter stated. "It's like a spectrum, with disarmed peace at one end and the war at the other end." Since neither is bad to us, we feel good; we feel that we should be in touch with the end of that spectrum, and that they are defined by such an infinite position.

Another is that if we try to deviate towards something that is not in support of our policies, it is a great problem. One can use such spiritual and fear of such an indefinite position.

The problem is that the political and economic with several domestic problems. One is the problem of the spiritual and fear of such an indefinite position.

Rain Leaves Spirits Undampened

As the rain settled, the students returned to their dorms, but the feeling of dampness remained. The cold and dreary weather made it difficult for students to enjoy their time on campus.

Lack of Contributions

Delays Arts Night Until Fall

To the Editor:

The Arts Night Committee (1952) is concerned with the lack of contributions from the students for Arts Night, which was postponed until the late fall of 1952. The Committee did not feel that the dramatic material submitted was suitable for a well-organized arts night and decided to match the calendar of previous years.

Improved Human Beings

Must Suffer Many Years With Strange Trouble

To the Editor:

Poor Poor Frel! We humans can save the dogs and prevent them from suffering, but the problem is more complex for us. Even if we try to help them, we must remember that some problems are not easily solvable. We must continue to work towards a better world for all beings.

Since the Community Kitchen is dependent on the college for most of its customers' money, why not make it a weekly habit, any time from 3:30 to 5:00? It's more than worth the walk.

To the Editor:

On campus, world peace and Europe may seem far off, but perhaps there are some students who would like to see for themselves how they may have an intimate knowledge about both right in their own homes this summer.

The U. S. State Department is sending many European students to this country and has asked The Experiment in International Living to place these students in American homes for a month this summer. Perhaps there are some students who would like to have an intimate knowledge about this country through these students, and all of seeing their own country through their eyes more than repays host families.

If there are any students at Bryn Mawr College who will be at home this summer and are interested in The Experiment in International Living, they may contact me at Bucknell University or at the hostel.

I would certainly appreciate it if you could publish this letter or an article about the Hospitality Program of The Experiment. Incidentally, more than 400 Americans each summer have an opportunity to live in European families under the same setup. Thank you for your cooperation in this endeavor.

B. Linn Shous Purposes For The Language Major

about the Junior Year Abroad, the French House, Latin America and the Good Neighbor, Creole and Piazza and Dance. Only one language major remains vague, Russian, which has neither a Junior Year nor an Artifact. So we add: The purpose of the Russian major is to give a girl a command of the colloquial language in case she is ever caught on the steppe. She will also read in the original about the famous Russian soul, which perhaps never existed and was officially abolished in 1917.

There will be no more issues of the COLLEGE NEWS until the day of Commencement, June 3. The final NEWS will announce Senior award winners and last minute Graduation news. Watch for its arrival in the halls!

The U. S. State Department is mailing packs of soil to the boys of the whole college year.

On campus, world peace and Europe may seem far off, but perhaps some students will be interested in seeing these students through the eyes of their own homes. This summer.

The Experiment in International Living has asked some families to place these students in their own homes. The families thoroughly enjoyed this experience, and, incidentally, those of the student hosts are planning to visit Australian families of these students this summer.

Of course, host families receive no financial remuneration, but the experience of learning about another country through these students, and also, of seeing our own country through their eyes more than repays host families.

If there are any students at Bryn Mawr College who will be at home this summer and are interested in The Experiment in International Living, they may contact me at Bucknell University or at the hostel.
