1944

Students of Bryn Mawr College
Belgian Commissioner Talks on Flemish Art

Specially contributed by Marjorie Alexander. '44

Music, in the broad sense, was the art of life in 15th century Flanders. The great influence of Christianity on the people was illustrated by the fact that there were churches on every almost block of a city, as few as 20,000 inhabitants. Religion was almost every day, even on the days of the week, and the number of months of the year had a religious significance.

The director pointed out that the quantity and the earnestness of the faces of the people reflected the hardworking nature of the Flemish. The scenes in the murals were all religious, for only the noble, wealthy, and powerful classes in life; this was only a protestation.

After the lecture three movies were shown, the first concerned "The Nativity," and was a part of one of the panels of which was shown in a new production at Berlin in 1938, and dealt with paintings by Memling, Van Eyck, Petrus Christus, and John in Bruges, and last was a film on life and art in Belgium. The film was made for educational purposes and could easily be recognized in the art of Van Eyck, and the following week, the "St. Exupery Treats Universal Problems, States Henri Peyre"

Goodhart, March 15. Henri Peyre, who achieved success in the Pleyers series on the modern art, is the subject of a discussion meeting today at 9 p.m. in the Audrienne Theatre.

Antoine de Saint Exupery, repre- sentative member of the new class of novelists who have achieved(today in the United States. The film, which was released as "St. Exupery in Life and Art," was illustrated by images. "Furthermore he mal."

It was in line with the traditional religious Belief, the Van Eyckian lamb, and the "Smallness of the Face of the People." Reflection of the people's face reflected the religious belief of the people.

The "St. Exupery in Life and Art," was illustrated by images. "Furthermore he mal."

The Sophomore Class has nominated Patricia Behrens, Levina Breindlinger, Dorothy Bruchholz, and M. Greene for the vice-president, the position of the Sophomore Association's Committee.

The vice-president of the Undergraduate Association works closely with the president and his place when he is absent. The vice-president also heads the Entertainment Committee and explores the club activities.

The college activities of the nominates are as follows:

Patricia Behrens

Pat in art in the Sophomore Class. Last year, she was an alternate member of the Freshman Freshman Show was also a member of the Sophomore Club and the president of the Sophomore Committee.

Levina Breindlinger

Levina was the first member of the Sophomore Class. She was also a member of the Sophomore Club and the president of the Sophomore Committee.

Dorothy Bruchholz

Dorothy was the first member of the Sophomore Class. She was also a member of the Sophomore Club and the president of the Sophomore Committee.

M. Greene

M. Greene was the first member of the Sophomore Class. She was also a member of the Sophomore Club and the president of the Sophomore Committee.

Belgian Commissioner Talks on Flemish Art

Specially contributed by Marjorie Alexander. '44

Music, in the broad sense, was the art of life in 15th century Flanders. The great influence of Christianity on the people was illustrated by the fact that there were churches on every almost block of a city, as few as 20,000 inhabitants. Religion was almost every day, even on the days of the week, and the number of months of the year had a religious significance.

The director pointed out that the quantity and the earnestness of the faces of the people reflected the hardworking nature of the Flemish. The scenes in the murals were all religious, for only the noble, wealthy, and powerful classes in life; this was only a protestation.

After the lecture three movies were shown, the first concerned "The Nativity," and was a part of one of the panels of which was shown in a new production at Berlin in 1938, and dealt with paintings by Memling, Van Eyck, Petrus Christus, and John in Bruges, and last was a film on life and art in Belgium. The film was made for educational purposes and could easily be recognized in the art of Van Eyck, and the following week, the "St. Exupery Treats Universal Problems, States Henri Peyre"

Goodhart, March 15. Henri Peyre, who achieved success in the Pleyers series on the modern art, is the subject of a discussion meeting today at 9 p.m. in the Audrienne Theatre.

Antoine de Saint Exupery, repre- sentative member of the new class of novelists who have achieved(today in the United States. The film, which was released as "St. Exupery in Life and Art," was illustrated by images. "Furthermore he mal."

It was in line with the traditional religious Belief, the Van Eyckian lamb, and the "Smallness of the Face of the People." Reflection of the people's face reflected the religious belief of the people.

The "St. Exupery in Life and Art," was illustrated by images. "Furthermore he mal."

The Sophomore Class has nominated Patricia Behrens, Levina Breindlinger, Dorothy Bruchholz, and M. Greene for the vice-president, the position of the Sophomore Association's Committee.

The vice-president of the Undergraduate Association works closely with the president and his place when he is absent. The vice-president also heads the Entertainment Committee and explores the club activities.

The college activities of the nominates are as follows:

Patricia Behrens

Pat in art in the Sophomore Class. Last year, she was an alternate member of the Freshman Freshman Show was also a member of the Sophomore Club and the president of the Sophomore Committee.

Levina Breindlinger

Levina was the first member of the Sophomore Class. She was also a member of the Sophomore Club and the president of the Sophomore Committee.

Dorothy Bruchholz

Dorothy was the first member of the Sophomore Class. She was also a member of the Sophomore Club and the president of the Sophomore Committee.

M. Greene

M. Greene was the first member of the Sophomore Class. She was also a member of the Sophomore Club and the president of the Sophomore Committee.
Model Assembly

This year the Model College of the United Nations will meet at Bryn Mawr. Few students appreciate its structure, aims or function, nor its difference from other discussion groups.

The Model League is composed of delegates from colleges all over the country and is the brainchild of one of the United Nations. They meet to discuss and draft resolutions. All the delegates meet in an assembly to vote and amend the entire constitution in its final form.

Because the opportunity to gain some insight into the working and problems of an international organization through active experience, the Model Assembly aims to bring to each generation of potential leaders an understanding of why international conferences are held, and how they operate. A realistic and effective method supplementing this purpose, giving a graphic explanation of international procedures as related to the issues behind them.

The principles underlying any artificial institution like the Model United Nations, each delegate being the representative of one of the United Nations. They meet to discuss and draft resolutions. All the delegates meet in an assembly to vote and amend the entire constitution in its final form.

Given the student's opportunity to gain some insight into the working and problems of an international organization through active experience, the Model Assembly aims to bring to each generation of potential leaders an understanding of why international conferences are held, and how they operate. A realistic and effective method supplementing this purpose, giving a graphic explanation of international procedures as related to the issues behind them.

The principles underlying any artificial institution like the Model United Nations, each delegate being the representative of one of the United Nations. They meet to discuss and draft resolutions. All the delegates meet in an assembly to vote and amend the entire constitution in its final form.

Ireland's Neutrality

The United States Government, with the support of Great Britain, has asked Ireland to discontinue its Axis envoy on the ground that they are in a position to spy on the United Nations' military preparations for invasion. With Prime Minister de Valera's refusal, an issue has arisen placing in jeopardy not only the success of the invasion but the lives of United Nations soldiers.

The United States aims are not to be satisfied by a flat refusal from Ireland in a matter which would appear to be a part of a general campaign against possible centers of Axis espionage. Primary steps have already been taken in the form of a conference between the American and an Irish mission.

Just how far the United Nations intend to go in exerting pressure on a government that has maintained a careful neutrality for more than four and a half years can only be conjectured.

Ireland is in a position of national security and from it at least a part of the Allied movement of troops and materials can be observed, while Northern Ireland is now the site of important naval and military installations. It is a fertile field for Axis espionage, yet Prime Minister de Valera insists that all steps to prevent espionage are being taken. He cites evidence of countermeasures on the part of his government pointing to the arrest of five Nazi parachutists. However, a recent article in PM by an Irish writer states that a spy ring of considerable proportions operates in Ireland. In any case it is doubtful true that despite the vigilance which the Prime Minister insists that he maintains, Axis agents do succeed in getting in contact with agents of Eire.

The issue is complicated, however, by political motives. De Valera, it is felt, will not back down since he is using the refusal to further his own position as an issue. His policy of neutrality has been supported by an overwhelming majority of the Irish people, while his prestige is essentially waning and his party has lost ten seats in the recent elections. It is felt that if he can get de Valera to agree on a common policy, it would make his government more popular in the minds of the people.

The issue is complicated, however, by political motives. De Valera, it is felt, will not back down since he is using the refusal to further his own position as an issue. His policy of neutrality has been supported by an overwhelming majority of the Irish people, while his prestige is essentially waning and his party has lost ten seats in the recent elections. It is felt that if he can get de Valera to agree on a common policy, it would make his government more popular in the minds of the people.

Ireland is in a valuable strategic position; from it at least a part of the Allied movement of troops and materials can be observed, while Northern Ireland is now the site of important naval and military installations. It is a fertile field for Axis espionage, yet Prime Minister de Valera insists that all steps to prevent espionage are being taken. He cites evidence of countermeasures on the part of his government pointing to the arrest of five Nazi parachutists. However, a recent article in PM by an Irish writer states that a spy ring of considerable proportions operates in Ireland. In any case it is doubtful true that despite the vigilance which the Prime Minister insists that he maintains, Axis agents do succeed in getting in contact with agents of Eire.

The issue is complicated, however, by political motives. De Valera, it is felt, will not back down since he is using the refusal to further his own position as an issue. His policy of neutrality has been supported by an overwhelming majority of the Irish people, while his prestige is essentially waning and his party has lost ten seats in the recent elections. It is felt that if he can get de Valera to agree on a common policy, it would make his government more popular in the minds of the people.

The issue is complicated, however, by political motives. De Valera, it is felt, will not back down since he is using the refusal to further his own position as an issue. His policy of neutrality has been supported by an overwhelming majority of the Irish people, while his prestige is essentially waning and his party has lost ten seats in the recent elections. It is felt that if he can get de Valera to agree on a common policy, it would make his government more popular in the minds of the people.

Ireland is in a valuable strategic position; from it at least a part of the Allied movement of troops and materials can be observed, while Northern Ireland is now the site of important naval and military installations. It is a fertile field for Axis espionage, yet Prime Minister de Valera insists that all steps to prevent espionage are being taken. He cites evidence of countermeasures on the part of his government pointing to the arrest of five Nazi parachutists. However, a recent article in PM by an Irish writer states that a spy ring of considerable proportions operates in Ireland. In any case it is doubtful true that despite the vigilance which the Prime Minister insists that he maintains, Axis agents do succeed in getting in contact with agents of Eire.

The issue is complicated, however, by political motives. De Valera, it is felt, will not back down since he is using the refusal to further his own position as an issue. His policy of neutrality has been supported by an overwhelming majority of the Irish people, while his prestige is essentially waning and his party has lost ten seats in the recent elections. It is felt that if he can get de Valera to agree on a common policy, it would make his government more popular in the minds of the people.

Ireland is in a valuable strategic position; from it at least a part of the Allied movement of troops and materials can be observed, while Northern Ireland is now the site of important naval and military installations. It is a fertile field for Axis espionage, yet Prime Minister de Valera insists that all steps to prevent espionage are being taken. He cites evidence of countermeasures on the part of his government pointing to the arrest of five Nazi parachutists. However, a recent article in PM by an Irish writer states that a spy ring of considerable proportions operates in Ireland. In any case it is doubtful true that despite the vigilance which the Prime Minister insists that he maintains, Axis agents do succeed in getting in contact with agents of Eire.

The issue is complicated, however, by political motives. De Valera, it is felt, will not back down since he is using the refusal to further his own position as an issue. His policy of neutrality has been supported by an overwhelming majority of the Irish people, while his prestige is essentially waning and his party has lost ten seats in the recent elections. It is felt that if he can get de Valera to agree on a common policy, it would make his government more popular in the minds of the people.
Vivi French, B. M. Alumna. Returns.

I am back on campus for the first time this year. It is strange to be back after a long absence.

Swarthmore, and Bryn Mawr, with their unique values, have all contributed to this new atmosphere of seriousness. The transition had only begun in its first stages in 1942.

Mr. Hariman

Charlotte Rider '47, addresed the Owls' Night on Thursday, March 16; at 7:30 in Radnor Hall. The lecture is primarily for the graduate students, but undergraduates who wish to contribute the discussion are welcome.

Henry Bamford Parks will deliver four elements sermons this year. He has been assistant professor in the Department of Philosophy, and has now become a full professor. He is the author of several books on various topics such as modal logic, probability, and ethics.

Belgian Commissioner

Talks on Flemish Art

Continued from Page 7

In the Belgian art, which is characterized for richer patrons and usually involved in the portraits of the seigniories or kings. In the film on art and life in Belgium before the war, it was noticeable that the emphasis had changed from the religious to the secular. The paintings of the time were pictures such as that of a great lady in the Flemish style. M. Gori, says from being Commissioner of Historical Information for the Belgian government in exile, had a distinguished and versatile career in Belgium. He is one of the most widely read of the Flemish writers, and his collected editions were published last month by Fender under the title "L'Art Belge." In the literary field M. Gori is not a stranger to the Flemish poets, but he is also an eminent critic, especially on modern French poetry. M. Gori has done most of his creative work in the Flemish language.

As a scholar and historian, M. Gori has made the 16th and 17th centuries the great age of Flemish literature.

Dr. A. H. Frey explains relationship of Labor and Gov't in wartime.

Goodearth, March 6: "We must not under-estimate the part which labor and management can play by working together to improve these conditions," declared Dr. Alexander H. Frey, professor of history at the University of Pennsylvania and vice-chairman of the Regional War Labor Board, in a talk on The Government and Labor Relations in Wartime.

Dr. Frey has the government's policy toward labor and has been for some time definitely emphasized. This, he noted, is because "agencies of collective bargaining were one of the greatest protections of American democracy." In a democracy, bargaining must be used for determining the contribution and reward of the various members of society. Management bargaining with capital and credit with an equal status, to earn and unequal terms with labor in the form of income, was unsupported by an organization, a union of a strong sort.

Labor Handicapped

Sanitization, of labor, Dr. Frey stated, was the first essential of bargaining power, while the ability to bargain equals or even surpasses essential. Labor is handicapped, he said, when the business is in a deadlock, and by the lack of mobility of fluidity.

Thus, Dr. Frey declared, without the union's protection the worker is at the corporation's mercy, the corporation, which has a power in its price, would be able to keep wages down. The speaker emphasized that free labor unions are no guarantee that labor will not be handicapped, but that there was still a clause in the law that had to do so the speaker mentioned two causes: a) inertia among the workers and b) active opposition of the employer, the employer that Wagner Act

Dr. Frey treated the Wagner Act as a specimen of labor legislation in the United States, and noted particularly the functions of the National Labor Relations Board, which had no power to settle strikes, wage or conditions.

In his report, the Committee of One public representative, one labor representative, one management representative, turned out to be a good job for the Labor Board. It has been very effective in settling of one-third public representation, one labor representative, one management representative, and industrial representation. Through expansion and diversified by the structure, it has in many cases very successfully the problem of arbitration and adjustment brought it back.

Dr. A. H. Frey Explains Relationship of Labor and Gov't in Wartime.

Continue from Page 1

Acting on a request by the Committee of Published books on various topics including Jonathan Edwards, A History of the University of New York, and American, the student's pictures of the candidates for the prize, and a few intelligent questions would answer the latter. You should not vote, ignorant of either the office or the candidate, but it is your job and your privilege to vote intelligently. You can, and should, know what is going on, which organizations handle common affairs, and whom people are best suited to manage the organizations. Then you should participate, and cast a vote.

Invisible Mending Shop

Zipper's Western Made in CPN. PA.

Delicious Tea Community Kitchen

LANCASTER AVENUE

SOUTH SQUARE ARDMORE, PA.

At Stockton's

BRYN MAWR

Marti Wishes to announce that after MARCH 5, 1944

they will be located at

BRYN MAWR, PA.

FORMERLY AT 814 LANCASTER AVENUE.

Oh, Daddy dear, and did you

News that your town is safe

The loveliest gifts you ever

Can be found at

Zippers Repaired and Replaced

The irreverent gifts you ever

and you're

 peasant. Can I

Purple Restoring

...
J. M. Lee Intends to Keep League on Map

New president of the Bryn Mawr League Jeannine Marie Lee is a member of the League, which is a member of the National League. She has been president of the League for the past two years.

Dorothy Broehlohs is the secretary of the League. She has been a member of the League for the past three years.

New Officers for Undergraduates

Vacation Registration

Spring vacation begins on Thursday, March 31 at 2:00 p.m. Students must register their last report card at the library before spring vacation begins. They must then have the last report card at the library after spring vacation begins.

Clashes will begin on Tuesday, April 4th, at 8:00 a.m.

B.B. Basketball Team Triumphant Over Penn

Gymnasium, March 9. Winning for the first time this season, the varsity basketball team triumphed over Penn, 58-38. A dense crowd with the score often a toss, it was, nevertheless, kept fast and clean by effective swamping.

What the Penn forwards lacked in height they made up in speed and pass-work, but the yellow guards held them away from the basket and their shooting was, for the most part, inaccurate. The Owls were not shooting as well as usual either, with the exception of Nancy Niles, '41, who, after putting in the first basket, settled down to pile up ten points, two of which were consecutive free shots.

In spite of losing 38-28 to the Penn J.V., the second team, particularly the forwards, played extremely well.

Joint IRC Discussion Centers on Far East

Continued from Page 2

prohibited in this country.

China, David Hsia stated, is playing a constitutional government, which will be instituted as soon as possible after fighting stops, though it is not to be expected that true democracy will achieve a long time for a long time. In her external relations, China looks forward to the establishment of a Pacific Council, a scheme already tried out once in the Institute of Pacific Relations.

SPORTSWEAR

Coats Suits Dresses

Tres Chic Shoppe

SEINE THEATRE ARCADE

BRYN MAWR

Don't be a grind.

Take time out for tea at
THE COLLEGE INN

Have a Coca-Cola = Meet a new friend