WILSON SCHOLARS, FULLBRITEN WINNERS ARE IN '58 CLASS

Three Fulbright Grants for Foreign Study have been awarded this year to members of the graduating class. One scholarship for study at the American School of Classical Studies in Athens was given to Susan Fox, a Greek major. Adrian Tinsley, a psychologists major and 1968 president of Bryn Mawr College, has been granted a grant to study at the University of Bristol, England. Catherine Stimpson, an English major, will study contemporary literature at the University of Cambridge.

Nine Woodrow Wilson Awards for graduate study leading to teaching on the college level were also made to members of the class of 1958. They are: Donna Cohren, political science; Columbia; Ginsell Continued on Page 3, Col. 3.

Guest Speaker Forer College President

The 74th academic year of Bryn Mawr College closed this morning with the annual Commencement Exercises and the awarding by President McBride of 144 Bachelor of Arts Degrees. In addition 22 degrees of the Master of Arts, 17 Master of Service degrees and 13 Doctors of Philology degrees were awarded in the Gradu­ ate School.

The Commencement Address was given by Senator William Fulbright, Democrat, of Arkansas. Senator Fulbright was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford and studied at George Washington University. He taught law at George Washington and at the University of Arkansas and was at one time president of the latter institution.

At present, Senator Fulbright is Chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency and a member of the Committee on Foreign Relations. He has served in the Senate since 1945.

Senator Fulbright Addresses Commencement Audience

Dr. Harold J. Cadbury, a highly regarded historian and sociologist, addressed the Class of 1958 at the 74th annual commencement exercise of Bryn Mawr College. Dr. Cadbury, who is now president of Wellesley College, spoke on the theme, "The Rich Man's Face Well," which he heard the demand must be met, and "for joy" the other side of the coin. In choosing between two alter­ nations, Dr. Cadbury noted, it is necessary to face two sides equally. Even when one is faced with the issue resultant from a careful de­ cision he is not certain to carry out

To Have Pursued Well Made Decisions

Stressed By Cadbury In Baccaulateral

Have we, in the decisions which we make, the capacity to use our best judgment, to focus the mind and direct the spirit to accomplish that which is best, asked Dr. Hen­ ry Joel Cadbury in his baccalaureate sermon Sunday evening, June 10 in Goodhart Hall.

Dr. Cadbury, accepting the conv­ ention that a sermon called for the use of lexic, chose for his theme recent incidents from the New Testament concerning opposite reactions to be demanded to relinquish posses­sion. The first was the rich young ruler who asked how to win eternal life, and the second was the mer­ chant who said all his goods to obtain the pearl of great price. The former could not, and the second did, answer the challenge. Both reactions were made instantly and unconditioned, must depended on the different thoughts and conditions mentioned, and to­ gether form a sort of companion piece on the movement of choiceing.

In choosing between two alter­ natives, Dr. Cadbury noted, it is necessary to face two sides equally. Even when one is faced with the issue resultant from a careful de­ cision he is not certain to carry out
Miss Margaret Gilman

Respect and affection are personal sentiments. They cannot be otherwise. They become automatic. A public tribute to a person esteemed is an attempt in vain to render into a single formula the results of individual experience. This tribute is not to be mathematical. It is sentimental and personal—it asks to be recognized only as an affirmation of admiration by one person for another. It aspires to sound a chord of echo in those who share that admiration.

Margaret Gilman commanded a circle of academic respect of ever-widening circumference. She had done undergraduate and graduate work at Bryn Mawr and had taught at Harvard and Columbia. She had served as vice-president of the Modern Language Association of America, of the International Federation for Modern Language and Literature and was a member of the Committee of Sections of the American Council of Learned Societies. She had taught at Bryn Mawr Chemistry since 1893 and had been chairman of the French department since 1848. Her critical work and great admiration for the nineteenth century poet, Charles Baudelaire are concern for each of her students and her peculiar aptitude for the wayside. victims of a pursuit for the "higher things" of us; while we cannot recall a time when we were not...
